

Ketabton.com

“NAQLUNA”

OR

SOME PUSHTU PROVERBS & SAYINGS

BY

COLONEL C A BOYLE, C I E, D S O

(Second Edition)

Published by :—

FAQIR CHAND MARWAH

BOOK-SELLER AND PUBLISHER

PESHAWAR.

(ALL RIGHTS RESERVED)

Price Rs. 5

1939.

PRINTED AT

THE IMPERIAL (ELEC) PRESS, PESHAWAR

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

It is hard for an Englishman to realise the importance illiterate Pathans attach to the proverbs and maxims which are used by their fellow tribesmen. To them they represent the accumulated wisdom of generations of wise men. Nothing will appeal so much to their keen sense of humour as a well-known proverb aptly quoted in the course of conversation. On occasion, when they will listen to no other kind of argument, they will accept the decision of one of their own maxims which fits the case.

An example of this was the late Sir George Roos Keppel's answer to a 'jirga' of Massuzais which he had convened in order to inform them of the compensation the Government demanded for a series of raids they had made into British territory. The Massuzais are divided up into two political factions the black and the white factions (Tor and Spin Gund), between whom for centuries, there has been an undying blood feud. The elders of each of these factions blamed the other faction for the raids, and extolled the friendship of their own faction for the British. Sir George Roos Keppel listened to their tirade and at the end remarked, "a dog, whether it be black or white or grey, is a dog just the same." To hear one of their own maxims quoted as a reply made them realise, more clearly than any other form of answer, that further argument was useless, and that the tribe as a whole was held responsible for keeping the peace.

The proverbs and sayings in this book I have collected from the rank and file in the Frontier Militias and from villagers, the large majority of whom were illiterate. Examples will be found of the proverbs of Afridis, Bangash, Khattaks, Sulaiman Khels, Turis and Yusufzais. It must be understood that no one Pathan will know all of them, though it is certain he will know some. They must be used, therefore, with discretion. The answer one would get by asking a Khattak if he knew the meaning of a Yusufzai's scathing criticism of Khattaks in general, can better be left to the imagination than described. Some of the sayings will sound vulgar and coarse to English ears. The Pathan does not consider them so; and it is from his point of view that they should be judged. The student of Pushtu will find in them a wealth of idiom, and expression and a comprehensive vocabulary. The uses of the tenses of the verb are particularly noteworthy. The Pathan frequently uses the past tense when we in English use the present and vice versa.

Although the collection is by no means complete, it is hoped that a study of the book may help the student in conversing with Pathans to understand that little bit which one so often misses and what it is they are all laughing at.

The first edition of Naqluna met with some criticism on the grounds that certain of the proverbs were not used, that there were grammatical mistakes in others etc etc Khan Bahadur Ahmad Jan of Peshawar very kindly offered to revise the whole book with me

With his advice certain of the sayings in the first edition, which are only used in certain localities or tribal areas, have been omitted, and have been replaced by others which are more generally known

On my own responsibility, however, a few sayings of local import, complete with grammatical mistakes, as they are actually said have been retained

The proverbs are re arranged in alphabetical order, and the key word in each is over-lined

My best thanks are due to Khan Bahadur Ahmad Jan for all the trouble he has taken in checking all the proofs and for the untiring help he has given me in the revision of the book

SIMLA

April, 1938

C A B

THE PATHAN TRIBES

OF

THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

—:~o:~—

(1)

HISTORY

Every true Afghan claims descent from Afghana the son of Jeremiah, the son of King Saul of Istaël. This Afghana is said to have been the Commander of the forces of King Solomon.

They say that, in about the year 600 B. C., their ancestors were carried away from Palestine by Nebuchadnezzar, who settled them as colonists in Persia and Media. Media is part of the modern Kurdistan, and it is interesting to note that the Kurdish language is very akin to Pashto.

In the course of time they migrated east into the mountains of Ghor to the east of Herat, and the modern Hazarajat of Afghanistan, where they were known as the Beni Israel, or the Beni Afghana.

In 327 B.C., Alexander invaded India, and Heroditus mentions in his history, that at that time the Apartyae, who have been identified with the modern Afridis, lived in the Safed Koh; the Satragyddae, who have been identified with the Khattaks, occupied the Sulaiman range and the northern portion of the plains between it and the Indus; and the Gandhari, who lived round Peshawar.

These, who probably represent the original frontier tribes, were of Indian extraction and Buddhists.

In about the year 626 A.D., Muhammad, the Prophet of Arabia, sent a missionary, Khalid-bin-Walid by name, who is said to have been an Israelite, to convert the Beni Afghana in the mountains of Ghor. These people were very impressed with what they heard, and eventually their chieftain, Kais, (or Kish) went himself with some of the elders of the tribe to see Muhammad and to hear him preach.

They were soon converted, and Kais, on conversion, was given the name of Abdur-Rashid. The Prophet was so impressed with the steadfastness of his faith that he gave him the soubriquet of 'Pathan', which, in Syriac signifies the wood on which they lay the keel when constructing a boat.

It is from the three sons of Kais — Sarban, Gharghusht, and Baitan, that all Pathans trace their descent.

Kais and the elders returned to Ghor, and soon succeeded in converting the Beni Afghana to Islam.

Inspired with the fanaticism of the new faith, the Beni Afghana advanced eastwards, converting the people as they went. By 700 A.D., they had reached the line Kābul-Kandahar. The people of the country were then either Persians who were fire-worshippers—'Gabr', or Indian Buddhists.

At Kandahar they met the Gandahari; whom they were unable to defeat by force of arms, and so they settled in the district, and intermarried with them, and at length converted them to Islam. They also adopted from them the Pashto language. In the course of time the two races became so completely amalgamated as to form a distinct nation, called the Afghans, professing to be descended from Kais.

Eventually all the Gandaharis accepted Islam, and under the banner of Islam advanced eastwards until, by the year 750 A.D. they reached the Indus.

In the eleventh century, India was invaded by Mahmud of Ghazni, who

(c) ketabton.com: The Digital Library
converted the Afridis to Islam.

It was not until the end of the twelfth century, after the invasion by Muhammad Ghorī, that the original frontier tribes-the true Pathans-were converted.

So the invaders spread over the frontier, and eventually formed themselves into tribal communities, and the various wars and invasions of history have given them the lands they now possess.

TABLE SHOWING ROUGHLY THE DESCENT OF THE AFGHAN AND PATHAN TRIBES IN ACCORDANCE WITH THEIR OWN TRADITIONS.
Kais—Abdur Rashid.

(II)

The characteristics of the Pathan.

All of us can appreciate the fact that he is a good sportsman and enjoys a day's shooting or fishing. Moreover he usually has a great sense of humour, and will laugh heartily at a joke. Prima facie cheerfulness, courage, courtesy and generosity are his outstanding characteristics. His hospitality indeed is proverbial. So, those British officers who come in touch with the Pathan and can understand his language are much attracted by him.

However, those who have experienced the state of utter lawlessness that exists in their country, or who have been engaged in operations against them, will describe them as blood-thirsty, revengeful and treacherous.

It must be remembered that every Pathan is in honour bound to defend his izzat (honour) in the case of the individual, in accordance with the standard which is termed Pukkhto, and which, in the case of the tribe, is governed by a code of laws called Pukkhtunwalai, which is based on nang or nang-i-Pukkhtana i. e. tribal honour.

Should he fail, in accordance with this code to exact retribution for insult, murder, etc, he becomes an object of scorn to his tribe-an outcast-daus.

(III)

Tribal Organisation.

The basis of the tribal organisation is the kor, i. e., the house or family, the members of which acknowledge the authority of the eldest member.

The village will consist of several kor and is subdivided into kandis all of which will acknowledge the authority of the village malik.

A clan, which may be called a khel, or may be designated by the suffix zai, is composed of a group or several groups of villages. These as a rule, acknowledge a chief malik. In the Peshawar district this latter may be called malik-i-tappa where a group or several groups of villages is called a tappa. A number of such clans may be combined into a qaum or tribe, and if they are not divided by some feud, the various clans may recognise one chieftain.

Each khel or clan is a separate little democracy. Its internal affairs, blood-feuds and disputes are settled by its jirga or council of elders, which is guided in its work by the above-mentioned code of laws (which is) called Pakkhtunwalai.

(iv) Pakkhtunwalai

This code is based on three principles — mailmastia or hospitality, Nanawate or protection, and Badal or retaliation.

Mailmastia: Most villages possess a hujra or guest house where guests and stray travellers are housed and entertained as guests of the village as well as circumstances permit. Should no hujra exist, they will generally be given shelter in the village mosque. The village holds itself responsible for the person and property of a guest for the duration of his stay.

Pathans regard hospitality as an essential duty.

Nanawāte: This term signifies going as a suppliant to some person's house to seek (a) refuge or asylum: (b) forgiveness or pardon: (c) a favour or assistance.

In the first case, the man to whom the request has been made must shelter the supplicant even at the risk of his own life.

In the second and third cases, he usually solicits the good offices of some elders, Mullas, or Sayids who form a deputation for the suppliants.

In accordance with the custom of the Afghans such a request can seldom be refused.*

Recently there have been examples of a very intense form of Nanāwate which takes the form of a deputation of women bearing Qurans on their heads.

Badal: This signifies the taking of retaliation for insults whether personal or to the family or tribe; or for injury; or in pursuance of a blood-feud. Sometimes, when a man is too weak to take his revenge, he has recourse to balandra i.e. hired assassins.

(V)

Blood-feuds.

These may be either individual, inter-village, tribal, or general.

They are of two types-zboda and wural. In the former men only are shot; in the latter women, cattle, dogs etc, are shot as well.

The most common causes of these feuds are intrigues with women, the murder of a member of the family, or of their hamsayas, disputes about debt and inheritance, and quarrels about land and water.

*Translation of Da Qissa Khani Gap by Khan Bahadur Ahmad Jan

Sometimes these feuds are settled by the offenders paying sāz or khun-bahā (blood money) in accordance with the decision of the jirga; and, on occasion, the good offices of a British official may be requisitioned to effect a settlement.

There are two feuds which may be said to be more or less common throughout the Frontier. The first is between the sects of Sunni and Shiah, the two religious factions in Islam.

In the N.W.F.P. only the Turis in the Kurram, half the Bangash, who live west of Kohat, and some sections of the Orakzai are Shiah, and all the other tribes are Sunni.

This feud has been in existence since 681 A. D., and can be compared to the struggle between the Western and Eastern churches in the Middle Ages.

The British Government might become involved in this by being asked to mediate or to protect a local minority.

Secondly there is the feud between the factions of Gar or the Spin Gund and the Samul or Tor Gund.

Although nowadays the feeling between these two factions seems to be gradually lessening, the feud is of sufficient importance to warrant mention.

The origin of this feud is nebulous. Many stories which are mere fables are told of its origin, but the truth is believed to be as follows :—

When the Beni Afghana reached Kandahar, the city was divided into two camps - the Gabr or fire-worshippers, and the Indian Buddhists who were called Saman. They both accepted Islam, but never combined, and as they advanced east, the peoples they converted adhered to the one faction or the other.

“Black dogs, white dogs, grey dogs are all dogs to us!”

There was nothing more to be said. and the jirga, realising that they could not play off their feuds against us, dispersed.

Note :—It may not be out of place here to note the difference between a jirga and a maraka. The literal signification of the latter word is mutual consultation, coming to terms; making peace.

A maraka is a tribal council which anyone can join, whereas in a jirga only such elders or persons can take part who are recongnised by the tribe.

A note on the fighting characteristics of the Pathans

These are considered only with reference to operations involving the use of Government forces.

Such operations can be considered under two headings :—

- (1) Raids on villages, herds, flocks etc. in British territory.

- (ii) Operations against a punitive force of all arms, or offensive operations in British territory as the result of a ghaza (jihad-holy war).

Raids: It must always be remembered that the object of the raiders is to seize the cattle or herds or other form of loot from the village concerned, and that they do not wish to fight, and will not fight except to cover their retreat. Moreover, should they have the slightest suspicion that information of the proposed raid has leaked out, they will not carry it out till a later date.

The following may be taken as an example of the principles on which they work when raiding :—

The evening before the day on which the raid is planned to take place, some travellers will halt at the village and ask for permission to spend the night at the hujra.

These travellers may consist of two old men and a woman, with a bullock, and possibly a mule or donkey heavily loaded.

During the night these travellers will endeavour to get up into one of the towers of the village

Their rifles will be taken off the mule or donkey, or out of their clothes

A little after dawn, when the cattle are driven out to graze, the raiding party will descend on them, and the boys driving the cattle will give the alarm. The village chugha will turn out to find that it is under fire from one of the village towers. The confusion that ensues will give the raiders sufficient time to get the cattle under way.

At this juncture the occupants of the tower will endeavour to make good their escape.

The covering party, when unable to get into the village as described above, will take up a suitable position outside the village during the night.

Major Operations The tribesmen's object in such operations will be either to defend their country from an invading force, or, when inspired with fanaticism by the preaching of some Mulla or holy man, to attack and kill the infidels, or give their lives in the attempt.

In this latter case some initial success may be achieved by synchronised raids on a large scale on villages just inside the frontier, yet sooner or later they will be opposed by considerable regular forces, and they will be faced with the necessity of defending their country.

(a) How the lashkar collects: When the elders of the tribe have decided to oppose the Sarkar with force, they will, in consultation with the most important and experienced of the leaders of the village chighas, decide on a plan of campaign. At the appointed time, the chigha drums will be beaten in the villages, and the chighas will assemble. These will then be led to the rendezvous, and so the lashkar will be formed.

Each man will be armed, probably with a 303 or other modern rifle, will be carrying all the ammunition he possesses, and sufficient food for three days or more. If circumstances permit, his women folk will replenish his supply of food, otherwise he may be compelled to return to his home or to some nearer village for the necessary provender.

Thus it will be seen that once the lashkar has deployed in accordance with the accepted plan, it will be very difficult for them to alter that plan or to make new dispositions.

(b) How they get their information — The Frontier Cantonment on such occasions will be full of tribesmen who have come in ostensibly with the object of doing business in the bazar. These will get into conversation with the servants of British officers etc and will get early information of any unusual military activities etc.

Mention must be made of the motor 'bus' which nowadays assists rapid communication and, where motor roads exist, provides a new form of contact between tribe and tribe, and brings the tribesmen into closer touch with administered territory.

As the columns march out along the roads, stray unarmed Pathans will be met. These may be old men or boys with bullocks or donkeys. As the column moves on they will signal with staff or head-dress to the 'shepherds' on the hill-tops. These 'shepherds' will take up positions on the hills from which a wide view of the approaches from the plains is obtainable. They will be in touch with the advanced elements of the lashkar.

It may also be noticed that as the columns march along the road, fires will be lit in or just outside the various friendly villages by the side of the road.

The 'shepherds' on the hills will notice these fires and appreciate their import.

Thus the lashkar will have early information of the approach of the Sarkar's forces.

(c) The battle It must be remembered that the two chief factors which affect the tactics of Pathans in action with British-Indian forces are —

(i) The fact that they realise that although they may be able to defeat and destroy detachments, they can never hope to defeat the Sarkar's troop decisively.

(ii) The fact that they estimate the result of an action by heads rather than by the temporary capture or loss of localities; unless the locality be a very holy shrine or an all-important village

They will therefore take up positions, very carefully concealed and weakly held from which they can snipe the troops at long ranges as they advance from below. From the air these positions will be invisible, and for the artillery and infantry there will be no visible target. Caves which abound in the hills are favourite defensive localities especially as they provide cover from air-craft

Natural adepts in the use of ground, nowadays the tribesmen are becoming more and more 'airminded'. In any case much of their country is unfavourable for observation from the air, and they quickly learn the art of concealment from air-craft by dispersion, movement in small parties and by night etc.

The chighas or detachments which have been detailed to perform a tura i.e. an outstanding act of bravery, will be located under cover in suitable localities on the flanks etc.

These chighas will take every opportunity of ambushing unwary detachments of troops, and if an exceptional opportunity offers, of delivering an attack with the arme blanche on the unprotected flanks of the advancing columns.

In any case they know that, sooner or later the advanced troops will have to retire to their camp, and then they will take advantage of their superior mobility on the hill-side to harass their retreat with the object of inflicting as many casualties as possible at a minimum cost to themselves

The advance of the British-Indian forces is, of course irresistible, and so they find themselves forced back to the limits of their territory. Now they will cross the frontier either into Afghanistan or some other tribal territory and demand nanawāte

The tribal jirga makes a formal surrender to the British authorities, the terms of peace are enforced, and in a few years' time the erstwhile warriors will return to their own lands in the guise of peaceful and law-abiding citizens

The most important tribes and where we now find them.

Tribe.	Locality.	Nos. of fighting men	Main sections and politics.
AFRIDIS	Tirah—900 sq. miles S. & W. of Peshawar.	44,000	Adam Khel Gar. Kambar Khel.....Gar. Kuki Khel..... Gar. Malikdin KhelSamil. Zakha Khel.....Samil. Others less important.
BAJAURIS	Bajaur & Dir.	34,000	Mahmund. Isozai. Ismailzai.
or TARKAN- RIS (originally of Yusufzai stock)	W. of Kohat and in the Kurram	8,000.	Miranzai } All Gar. Baizai } Some Shiahs in Samilzai } Kurram, Hangu and some of Samilzai.

Tribe.	Locality.	Nos. of fighting men.	Main sections and politics.
BATAN-NIS	Borders of Tank and Bannu from Gabar Mountain to the Gumal.	6,000	Tatta. Dhana. } Uraspan. } Khani Khel } Khwajak Kol } Haji or Para } Kbel } Bada Khel }
CHAM-KANNIS	East & North East Kurram.	4,500	All Tor Gund. Some Paras are Shiahs Numbers include Ahsiani and Gaodara hamsayas.
DAURS	Tochi Valley.	12,000	"Upper", & "Lower" Tappisad } Idak } Mallizad } Perhaps incorrect ethnographically to class these as Pathans.
KHALIL	Peshawar Valley.	8,000	Mattezar Barozai

Tribe.	Locality.	Nos. of fighting men.	Main sections and politics.
KHAT-TAKS	Teri Khattaks in Kohat, Bannu, and Rawalpindi Dists. Akora Khattaks in S. portion Peshawar and E. Kohat Dists.	40,000	Teri Khattaks (Western) Khwarram Seni. Teri. Barak. Saghri Bangi Khel. Nasraoti. Akora Khattaks (Eastern) Akora Yusafzai. Abizai. Bahlozai Shahman Khel (Upper)
MAHSUDS	Centre of Waziristan.	16,500	Kayakzai. Musazai. Dawezai.
MOH-MANDS	Kus Mohmands S. of Peshawar. Bar Mohmands.	25,000	Tarakzai. Halimzai. Baizai. Khwezai.

Tribe.	Locality.	Nos. of fighting men	Main sections and politics.
ORAK-ZAIS	Boundaries.— N. Afridis and Shinwaris. E. Afridis and Bangash. S. Bangash and Zaimukhts. W. The Khurmana and Chamkanins.	*32,000 *including Hamsayas.	Ismailzais .—Very disunited by feuds Lashkarsais —At feud with Turis, Zaimukht, Ali Khel, and Mamuzai Orakzai. Massuzais —Sami faction allied with Zaimukhts, Alisherzais. Some Gar Sections. Daulatzais —Sami Muhammad Khel —Shiah and Gar. Sturi Khel .—Sunni and Shiah Gar and Sami. All Shiahs, but divided into Mian-Murid and Drewandi factions
TURIS	The Kurram Valley.	6,000

Tribe.	Locality.	Nos of fighting men.	Main sections and politics.
URMARS	Kaniguram. Bhawalpur State. Two villages near Peshawar.	1,000	Probably connected with the Atish-Kash community in the Persian Gulf who were originally Yezidis.
UTMAN KHEL	Cis-frontier North of Peshawar district to Mardan. Trans-frontier South of Bajaur between the Panjora and Swat rivers and the Ambahar valley.	16,000	Ismailzai. Mandol. Alizai. Matakai. Pegohazai. Bimarai. Gurai and Sinazai.
WAZIRS OR DAR- WESH KHEL	Waziristan & Bannu District.	31,000	Utmanzais. Ahmadzais.

Tribe.	Locality.	Nos of fighting men.	Main sections and politics.
YUSUF ZAIS	N. E. of Peshawar Distt.	25,000	Cis-Frontier. Mandaur. Usranzai. Utmanzai. Baizai. Trans-Frontier.
ZAI- MUKHTS	Dir, Swat, Malakand, Bunner and Habyara (Tribal Territory). Boundaries:— N. W. Turis. N. & E. Orakzais. S. Bangash.	167,000	Mamuzai } Sami At feud Khoirad Kbel } with all neigh- bours.
		2,000

1. د هغه په سترگو کيس آب نشته
He has no sense of shame.

2. د مرغاري خو آب وه چه لير
The pearl has lost the lustre that it once had. (This can be said of those who have lost their honour or reputation).

3. اباسيند په چيو بهيري
The Indus flows in a raging torrent. i.e. Nothing can withstand its force. (This expression can be used as a warning to those who dare to attack some very powerful enemy. e.g., a Pathan tribe which proposes to declare a feud with the British Government).

4. اوس خبره په اباسيند وگڼه شوه
Now the matter is launched on the Indus. i.e. is beyond control.

5. اباسيند هم چه کسي کسي (ياپه کسو) شي نو وچ به شي
Even the Indus can be emptied by cupfuls. (cf: Drop by drop the lake is drained).

6. نَ اَپَرِيْدِي دِيْلِي دِه

It is an Afridi's hammer. (cf a bad penny.) Compare نَ مِهْمَنْدُو حُوْكِه دِه The Mohmand's goad. (The story runs that a Mohmand from tribal territory once gave a goad to a farmer in Peshawar. Whenever the Mohmand went into Peshawar he always reminded the farmer of his favour in giving him the goad. Eventually the farmer, in disgust, handed it back).

7. هَر سَرِي دِ اَحَلّ پِه دِيْلِي سُوْر دِي

Everyone is mounted on the grey horse of Fate. (Note.—Ajal means the appointed time of death).

8. پَتُو لِه اَحَلّ مِه مِه

Don't die before your appointed time !
(cf : Never say die).

9. پِه چَا مِ پِه چَا اَحْتَر

Some are sad, whilst for other it is the Festival.

10. اختر پست عيدۀ نه دي
The Id (festival) is not a paramour that it can pass by unobserved. i. e. A great event cannot be kept secret.
11. چه چرتۀ د ب نه وي هلته ادب نه وي
There can be no law and order without force. (The same idea is expressed by د ب سره ادب وي cf: Spare the rod and spoil the child.)
12. اس چه په ميدان ورزي د سواره په زور ورزي
When a horse gallops on the plain it is thanks to the skill and prowess of its rider. (This can be said of a skilful commander with reference to his victorious troops. ورتل = to fly.)
13. د يو اس غوږونه دي
They are the ears of the same horse.
(cf: They are as alike as two peas.
cf: د يو خاڅمي گلونه دي. They are flowers of the same bush).
14. د اس لته اس سهلي شي (پا زغمي)
Horses can stand the kicks of horses.

15. اس لره په لس لره
Keep a horse but keep it in hand.
16. اسودو معلونه وهل چبددخی هم پسې ورتلې
Some horses were being shod, and a frog held up its feet to them as well. i.e. Imitation leads many into folly.
17. آسمان ده مه ټوکه په خپل مخ به د پرېوزې
Don't spit up at the sky, it will only come back on your own face. (Used to one who abuses those in a higher position.)
18. هغه د آسمان کپ دې
He is the constellation called 'da āsmān kat'. (This constellation always moves and changes its position. This is said of a person whom one wishes to meet but who is very hard to get hold of.)
19. اصبل له اشارت کم اسل له کونک
A hint for the well bred, and a stick for the ill bred. (cf: A nod for a wise man and a rod for a fool.)

20. هغه د املوکو په تول کښن راځي
He has been weighed with the plums.
i. e. caught up in the stream.
21. د عاجز سړي تيل نه بليږي او د دولتمند اور په اوبو بليږي
A poor man's oil won't burn whilst even the water of a rich man catches light.
22. د وړخ تيري اوبه بديته نه راځي
Water that has passed through the cut does not come back. i. e. So there is nothing more to be done about it.
23. اوبه په ډانگ نه بياږي Water cannot be cut with a club. (To some extent this has the signification of 'Blood is thicker than water.')
24. اوبه په کمزوري ځاي زر ماتېږي Water overflows where the banks are weak. (cf: The weakest goes to the wall).
25. د زوردار اوبه په لوړه څيږي
A strong man's water flows up-hill. i.e.
Everything goes well with him.

26. اوندۀ ده در سرَ واروی دوحۀ نوکز خۀ سل گز

When the water comes over one's head, what does it matter if it be one yard or a hundred yards deep? (cf: In for a penny in for a pound)

27. اوس اوندۀ دَ ورخَ ندری دی

Now the water has passed the cut (in the canal etc.) i. e. Things have come to a pretty pass.

28. اوندۀ وخسۀ دَ لندی چہ پرهارد وگندی

Drink the water of Landı (Kabul river) that your wound may heal. (Note. The water of Kabul river is very pure and is said to have curative properties.)

29. چہ اوندۀ وی بو تدم (با تدر) نه حاجب ند وی

When water is at hand there is no necessity to perform one's ablutions with sand. (Note.—When water is not available Muslims are permitted to perform the necessary ablutions before prayers with sand.)

30. کہ اوبہ ہر خوشوہ لہوڑی شیٰ خو پل نہ لاندِ خبی However high the water may rise it will still go under the bridge.
31. دَ اور او دَ اوبو اشغای نہ شیٰ
Fire and water will never become friends.
32. زمکہ ہغہ سوزی چہ اور پیر بلدی
Only that part of the ground burns which has caught fire. (cf: It is the wearer that knows where the shoe pinches).
33. د خلی اور پہ خرمن واییدہ
One blade of grass set fire to the stack.
(cf : Little chips light great fires.)
34. د اور پہ زہا مہ خہ او دسپی پہ گیا مہ خہ
Don't walk towards firelight nor the barking of a dog. (Note.—Advice to those travelling at night. Everyone knows how close those things may seem at night, and how far off they may be.)
35. د اور سومی پہ اور زغیڑی
Who is burnt by fire is cured by fire.
(cf : A hair of the dog.....)

36. اوسدنه حه بوده شی نو نه اورنه شی

Iron will not straighten out until it is 'heated. i. e. Punishment makes an obdurate man tractable.

37. اوسن په لږه وغل

To stuff a camel into the hem of one's trousers, i. e. with the object of hiding or stealing it. (Note:—Bada is the hem of the trousers through which the string passes to fasten them round the waist. Said of a man who does something ridiculous which is sure to lead to detection.)

38. اوسن په پيسو وه نو نيسي نه وی حه پيسی وی نو اوسن نه وه

When the camel was for sale I had no money, but when I had the money the camel was not for sale. cf :

حه عايس زو نو نيسي نه وی حه نلنی وشری نو عايس نه زو

When I had teeth I had no parched gram, but now that I have parched gram I have no teeth.

39. اوپن په دروزه نه درنډیروي

Druza will not overload a camel.
(Druza-stubble; stumps of wheat etc. left by the sickle; the hard part of the head of corn left after threshing.) cf :

اوپن په غاییل نه درنډیروي

A camel's load will not be made more heavy by putting a sieve on it.

40. گوزه چه اوپن په نوم اړخ خملي

See on which side the camel will lie down. cf : See on which side of the fence the cat will jump.)

41. اوپن اوپن څه د سم شو پاتي سوڅه (اورمیدو)

Camel! What member of your body is straight that your neck alone should not be so? (Said of one who has no good in him.)

42. دا وپن د پمنی

The enmity of a camel. i. e. An unending and unreasoning enmity.

43. نو نادر شاه اوسان په دنگار دغول پروړی سرای ته ورسله
خا ورده پسندنه وکوله خه ولی نسلی وی خه نا پرسان نادر شاه
دی هسی نه ره پته دنگار شم

A king was commandeering some camels and a fox ran out of the Sarai (palace) Someone asked the fox why he was running away. The fox replied, "No questions are asked under this government, and God forbid that I too should be roped in."

44 اوسان په خپلو منډارو کس سوئدری

Camels slip in their own urine. (cf Hoist with his own petard)

45. خوک چه اوسان ساتی نو درواری د لوی کړی

Those who have camels should have lofty gateways. (cf: Great ships require deep waters.)

46. اوگر او شدره یو شی دی

Gruel and pap are one and the same thing

47. چہ اوگر سڙي ٻلا ڀر ڀريوڙي
When gruel gets cold it becomes harmful. i. e. Eat your food quickly whilst it is hot. (cf : Strike while the iron is hot.)
48. تہ خود ايندڙ گل ڀي
You are a flower of the fig tree. i. e. You are very hard to get hold of. (Note : Fig trees have no flowers.)
49. ڪمي بابوڪي سڙي ڀي لڪي
Little chaffinches have long tails. (cf : Little pitchers have long ears.)
50. چہ وڙي ٻاران مڙي ڪوي خواران
Poor men enjoy the rain. i. e. Rain makes the crops grow which means cheaper grain.
51. له ٻاران نه تنبندہ ڏ ناوي لاند ڀي شپہ شوه
He was running away from the rain and spent the night under a water-spout. (cf : Out of the frying-pan.....).

52. آزار نه جا نازار موندلی نه دی
Nobody has acquired wealth by cruelty.

53 هعه نه له نادی دی داودشاه نه راعلی وی
He must have come from Banda Daud Shah. i. e. He must be daft.
(cf : Peebles-Banda Daud Shah is a small village near Kohat noted for the stupidity of its inhabitants.)

54. اموحده تلا په نسّم الله نه منع کیری (یا نه گری)
A hardened sinner will not be deterred from his evil purpose by merely reciting the Muslim creed to him.
i. e. It is of no use wasting one's breath over bad men. Strong action and punishment are what is needed to hold them in check.
(Note.—Bism illah—in the name of God—are the first words of the Quran and of any other book written by a Muslim. They are therefore a synonym for the beginning of anything.)

55. ورژکي بلا ستري بلا ته واي چه بو

A small calamity says boo to a big one.

56. په بني کس يو موټي اوړه نشته لاپي د دولتمن کوي

There is not a handful of flour in his bag, yet he boasts of his riches.

57. د بودي ټال

The old woman's swing. i. e. The rainbow.

58. د بودي دمه په بودي کيري

Old women are happy with old women.
(cf : Birds of a feather.....)

59. بيذات خيلو لس کولي پر اته شوي

The Bezat Khels made a mess of it.

Note:—The Bezat Khel are a sub-section of the Yusafzai and are renowned for their stupidity.

To make eight out of ten is a common way of expressing failure.

60. له ورگاری ده دنگار په دی Forced labour is better than idling.
i. e. Any work is better than none.

61. پښی د حار په کور کس تکاله وخورله په لرسم
ده بلو (نا نه)

A bald man had a meal in the Khan's house and then could not walk straight. i. e. went away swaggering. (Note:—Tikala means a round of bread, but it is used with the sense of food in general, or meal. Note also that bald man are generally despised.

62. بیو (یا آپ) اه دواړه لاس حزی
It takes two hands to clap. i. e. It takes two to make a quarrel.

63. پستانه په لیدی لیاری مړه دی
Pathans die by taking the short cut.

(This refers to the Pathan custom of not carrying on feuds on the high road, and also to the fact that they usually avoid the latter which are more safe.)

64. شپه م هم تیره کوره پالزم تم مړ نه شو (or شد)

I spent the night (by his bedside) but my father did not die. i. e. hoping to step into the dead man's shoes.

65. سل کال پس پالزي وکتلو بل ورتنه وو چه پوره د وکړه

He avenged his father after a lapse of a hundred years, and someone said to him, "You have been quick!"

که پښتون سل کال پس بدل واخلي نو هم وايي cf: چه زرم واخست

If a Pathan takes his revenge after a hundred years, he will still say that he was quick over it.

66. چه پلاو خوري نو په پلاو مري

If one eats pulao one will die from steel. i. e. Rich men die by the sword.

67. بِنَارِ دِ وَیِ حُو بَه نِنَازِ دِ وَیِ

If only an onion, give it with good will. (cf: Rich gifts seem poor when givers prove unkind.)

68. دَ وَلَانِیِ اَو دِ وَلَانِیِ دَاسِیِ بَدِیِ وَه لَکَه دَ مَرِکِ اَو دِ پِشَوِ

The feud between these two is like a feud between a cat and a mouse.

(cf: — دَ هَعُو مَرِه دَ عَلِیِ اَو دِ کَافِرِ دِه)

The (feud) between them is like (a feud) between Ali and an infidel (Note:—Ali was the son-in-law of the Prophet Mohammad, and was always fighting the infidels.)

69. دَ اَوِرُو پِشَوِ دِه رِه حَوِرِه کِیَمِ خُو مَدُونِ بَه خَوِکِ کَوِیِ

I can fashion a cat out of flour, but it won't mew. i. e. Bluff is of no avail if there is nothing behind it.

(Note—Da oro`pisho = bluff.)

70. پيشو به شايخه نه شي که په سرکوزی پيشه شي
A cat won't be a Shaikh (saint) when it sees a mouse.

cf:— چه غوینده نه وي پيشو شايخه وي

So long as there is no meat near him a cat will be a Shaikh.

71. پيشو شايخه شوه
The cat has become a Shaikh, i. e.
Because there is nothing on at the moment.

72. د پيشو غو لړ مڼکيا ډير
The nuptials of cats is a small affair, but they make a lot of noise about it.

73. پي پيشو وڅښل ډنډي ماتو وخورلي
The cat drank the curds, and Mato got beaten for it. i. e. Mato being the house-wife.

74. که غډران د پکار وي نو پيشوگان مه تله
If you wish to live in peace don't weigh cats. The story runs that early one morning a farmer gave his wife a seer of meat, and told her to have it cooked ready for him on his return from the fields at noon. Later on her lover came in to pay his respects, and she gave him the meat which he ate. When the farmer returned he asked for the meat, and his wife told him that the cat had eaten it. "What rot!" said her husband. "How could the cat have possibly eaten a whole seer of meat?" "I'll go and weigh it." The wife replied in the words of the proverb — "If you wish to live in peace, don't weigh the cat!" The moral is the one ought to "Live and let live," to wink at small irregularities, and not be too particular in testing the truth of explanations given by one's wife, etc. etc. cf — "Masters should be sometimes blind, sometimes deaf."

Also:—"He that would live at peace and rest. Must hear and see and say the best."

75. خلاق ژارې خو پيغله خاندي

The world may weep but a bride laughs.

76. تراپ نه دېي که عذرو که لعنت شه په دواړه توکه

Which is the better? a lash or a whip?
May both these types of cat o' nine tails be damned! (cf:—It is six of one and a half dozen of the other.)

77. که ته تر برور يې زه ستا تره يم کبرچن

Oh you prig! If you insist on saying that you are my cousin, know that I am no cousin but an uncle! i. e. In any case I am better than you.

78. تنزريه خپلي خولي نيولي يې

Oh grey partridge! Your own voice has given away your hiding place.

cf.—

که بی حایه زرگی ده و سبکی اواز ده سداک خنی حدر وه ده شهناز
خکه له دی حدی هسی معلومدری
حه چپل عر دی هر سوی لره عمار

If partridges called not out inopportu-nely, neither hunter nor hawk would know their whereabouts.
Hence from this it appears that:— “Every man is betrayed by his own tongue

79. نۆ کۆری لاری نا حولی ده ده راخی

What you spit out will not come back into your mouth i. e. You cannot retract what has once been said.

80. تۆتار په وار پیدری وروکی وده ندره کوی

Mulberries ripen in due season, but children won't wait till then to pick them.

81. نۆره چه وهلی شی وینه ولویری

Blood is spilt when the sword smites.

82. تُورِي پور غونبته خاخي نور غونبته

Where a Turi will ask for a loan, a Jaji will ask to increase his debt.

(Note:—A Turi's jibe at their neighbours.)

83. تا د خدایي جور کوي همونر ټټمان صحبم

Until God cures you, we'll be Thugs as well. (This refers to the well-known story of a lunatic who was being taken to hospital on a charpoy. On the way, a band of Thugs drove off the carriers and kidnapped the man, carrying him along on the bed. On going through the village the man cried out, "Save me! Help! These people are Thugs. They are Thugs and are taking me away!" Everyone knew that the man was mad, and their reply has become proverbial. It is used of people who suffer from imaginary fears. cf:— Wolf! Wolf!)

84. دَ نۆرې دَ تۆپک خورلې جورسې نه جورې
ستا د غاښو پهرونه

Sword cuts and gun-shot wounds heal in time, but those caused by your teeth never do. i. e. Love's wounds never heal.

85. له تش تۆپک نه دوه تن وږې

Two people are afraid of (the shot of) an empty gun.

86. لنډې تۆپک دې د خدای په رضا نه کوي لپه دارو خورې

It is a short gun, but it needs a whole handful of powder before it will go off. (Note:—This expression is used to describe an expensive amusement د خدای په رضا = from philanthropic point of view.

87. په تۆپک ویشلې ښه دې په خدای ملامت شرمندې دې
To be shot is all right, but to suffer calumny is disgraceful.

88. جِغِ عَوَارِي جِغِ دِ پِه غَارِي

You look for the yoke which is on your own neck. cf: The butcher looked for his knife, when he had it in his mouth. Hindustani :

بغل میں لڑکا شہر میں دھندورا

89. پرون جلا (وطن) وي نن نپي پتوي

Yesterday you were an outcast from your own home, and lo! Today you hide your feet in boots. (Said to one who has suddenly become rich.)

90. نا بِلد غلۂ جماعت ہم مات کوی دے

Even the mosque has been broken into by some inexperienced thief. (Said to one who makes a bad faux pas.)

91. جڈگ دَ بازانو وُہ ورکین پریوتہ سپلمہ

A dove has become embroiled in a fight amongst hawks.

92. جڈگ سوز شہ موزی تود شہ

When the fury of the battle abates, the skulker waxes bold.

93 نوى حلى راعله نوى رحى زاور

A new bride has come into the house and has brought new (fashioned) clothes with her (Said of an influential person whom everyone tries to copy)

cf — نوى نوى راعله نوى نوى زاور

A new bride has come and has started a new custom i e Although a woman generally gives way to her husband in all things, yet each new bride that enters the home introduces some change into his domestic arrangements

94 ن كور حلى سپكه وى

A girl is of no account in her own home

cf — ن كور حور نوز كور موده وى

A man looks on his own sister and daughter as sluts

95. جاني کا يو شان صحبت زوؤ کا بل شان

There is all the difference in the world between consorting with a young girl and an old woman.

96. چا پيسي وړکوي نو جاني به نه دتباغ نه هم رشي

If you pay for her you can get a mistress even from Kalabagh. (This is a saying of the Bangash of Kohat and means, 'Money makes the mare go.')

97. يو جولا جانب کچي وواستي نه مي ودهال بان ورتد نو چا جانب د کچي دي نو بيوتد مي ودهال چا "دهالي نه دهالي"

A weaver had taken an aperient, and jumped over the water-cut (outside the village to go out to the fields). Someone told him (to be careful as) he had taken an aperient. So he jumped back again saying, "very well, consider that jump as cancelled!"

(Note :— Nowadays the last words of the story viz: 'danguli nuh danguli' are used with the signification of "I withdraw what I have said.")

98. پروزن جولا شوي دن نپتي پتوي
Only yesterday you became a weaver, and to-day you are winding thread on a reel (or stealing reels). (Said to a novice or recruit who makes rapid progress.)

99. په لتوي پلن کړي حد حولا مندو (با مندو)
Give the weaver a jolly good kicking for falling in love. (Note :— The weaver, who was of a despised profession probably had no right to pay court to the lady in question.)

100. عقلمن حولا گان مالنه کړي Clever weavers sow salt.

(Note :— Weavers are renounced for their stupidity. This story is with reference to the well-known story of a weaver who spilt some salt on some ground where later a thick crop of grass came up. He told his brother weavers of his good fortune, and advised them, if they were clever, to do the same. This saying is used to express wasted effort. Thus, if students find these proverbs to be of no use the author can be accused of sowing salt.)

101. چاره که د سرو وي د لړمانه د منډلو نه وي

Even if the dagger be of pure gold, one should not plunge it into one's bowels.

i. e. Life is too precious to be risked for gold.

102. د چايويوه پياله هيڅ نه ده دويمه بس ده دريمه عبث ده

The first cup of tea is nothing, the second is enough, and the third is sheer waste.

103 کہ حرکتِ دانهٔ وده وایِ هم ده صدسی

Though the cock crow not, morning will dawn.

1 e Nothing is indispensable

(Cont) In contra distinction to the above, the following saying is current among the Khattaks —

کہ حرکتِ دہوی نو شپہ ده صنا ده شی

If there were no cock to crow, night would never become morning

104 کہ حرکتِ حہ پہ روز ندسی ہم شور کوی حہ نہ
فراری ندسی ہم شور کوی

A cock makes a great to-do whether you catch hold of it tightly or gently.

cf —

کہ حرکتِ کہ سولہ ندسی ہم یعدری کہ ددولہ ندسی ہم یعدری

A cock makes a great to-do whether you catch hold of it with good or bad intentions

(Note :— These are used of a man who is always grumbling. cf : Pigs grunt about anything or nothing.)

105. چرنگه چه خريدري كونه هي تدعيرني

The fatter a hen grows, the more costive she becomes. i. e. The better off a man is the more tight-fisted he becomes.

106. خو چرنگه په لاس كېنې ور نه كړي ملا نځدايي په رضا نه كا تعويذونه

Until you give him a fowl, the Mulla will not make you charms which bring God's blessing.

cf :— مېينه بي بارې نه انرېري

You can't milk a buffalo cow without putting something in front of her to eat.

107. دم د چرمينگي نه لري او لاس ښامارانو ته اچوي

You do not know the charm for a lizard and yet you lay your hands on great snakes.

(Note : Applied to one who undertakes a task far beyond his abilities.)

108. دوہ ورج نہ حافظ ہم نہ لیس لرگی ولوہری

One day a blind man's stick will fall out of his hand (Note —Said by one who has been blamed for an accident A hafiz is a man who has become blind from learning the Quran by heart)

109 دہک نہ ارگی نہ شی دہک نہ سپری نہ شی

One cannot make firewood out of bhang sticks, nor a man out of a Khattak.

(Note.—A Yusufzai taunt at their hereditary enemies)

110. باری نہ ہر چاسرہ سہ نہ لہ دہک سرہ دہک نہ کوی یاری دہر کندک سرہ

Friendship with anyone but a Khattak is good.

A Khattak always wants a bit of bread as well as friendship. (Note :--A Yusafzai taunt at the Khattaks and their proverbial poverty.

111. خورایی؟ خٹک! اس کبیس د خٹہ دی؟ کنڈیک پد کت کبیس د خٹہ دی؟ بنگ

Who are you? a Khattak! With a piece of bread in your hand, and a water-bottle under your arm (کت = armpit or lap)!

(Note:—Khattaks are renowned for their poverty.)

112. یا به انک ندوی یا به خٹک نہ وی
 Either there will be no Attock or there will be no Khattak.

cf:— یا به تک نہ وی یا به خٹک نہ وی

Either there will be no frontier or there will be no Khattak.

(Note:—A proud boast of one of the Khattak chieftains during tribal fighting in the early days of their history. cf:—By hook or by crook.)

113. کہ پد لاس کبیس می خٹک وی نو به خٹک وی
 If he has a hammer in his hand, he will be a Khattak. (Note — This refers to the story of a Yusafzai who was going to meet a Khattak, and asked how he should recognise him. The reply has become proverbial as Yusafzais look on all Khattaks as common labourers, and therefore expect to see them sitting by the side of the road breaking stones.)

114 د دٻڪو عوا نى پڻ چوڻه ده پاڻي

You are a Khattak's cow. You won't even get up for the goad.

115. د دٻڪو گمان د لدر ده ندر (نا ندر) وي

Khattaks are very suspicious

116 دوڪ حبراں دى د دداى پڻ گدعو خوب حبراں دى د حت پڻه گادو

Some marvel at the treasures of God and some at the sowing of a garment (i. e. the disparity of wealth.)

117. کَمَ خَيِّ دَ سَتَرِ پَه اِيَلِي سَتَرِ خَيِّ دَ خَدَايِ پَه اِيَلِي
A small man relies on a big, but a big man relies on God. i. e. However much man may look to his fellow man for assistance, in the end he has to turn to God for help.
118. غَرِيْبَ خَدَايِ كَرِيْ دُوَسَ چَا كَرِي
God made you poor, but who made you the dirty swine you are ? (cf :- A' of them are guid lasses, but where do a' the ill wives come frae?)
119. خَرَّ چَه لَه خَر نَه كَم شَيِ غَوَزِ پَرِيكولِ يِي پَكَارِ دِي
When donkey can no longer do the work of a donkey, it should have its ears cut off.
120. خَرَّ دَ خَوِيْدَ پَه خَوْرَاكِ خَه پَوَهِيْدِرِي
What do donkeys know of eating green wheat ?
121. خَرَّ سَنَكِرِ غَوَارِي يِي او پِيَشُو وِزَرِ غَوَارِي يِي
A donkey wishes it had horns, and a cat, wings.

122 د. ما ما کړه مطلب ور ده واحله Call a donkey 'Uncle' and get what you like out of him.

cf — حر دلاز کړه حاجب پر نار کړه
Call a donkey 'Father' and use him to the full.

cf — د حاجب په وحب کس د حره نه هم سپری پلاز وای
In time of need one will call even an ass 'father' (cf — Flatter fools to gain an end.

123 خه حر کئی خه می نار کئی What of a miserable donkey, or what of the small load it carries !

(Note — Said to a tyrant or bully, and means, I am not big or important enough for you to try your strength on)

124. خوه ه د کئی وی ه ه می نا کئی وی Donkey foals are loaded on according to their size.

125. خري خري زوي د وشه وري زه ي خه كه
خپل وري به وړي خپل به وړم

Someone said to a donkey, "You've got a foal!" "What has that to do with me," said she, "He'll carry his load, and I'll carry mine!"

cf :— Every man for himself.

126. د خري لكبي پاس نه لويشت كوي هم يوه ده كه لاڼد نه لويشت كوي هم يوه ده

If you measure a donkey's tail by spans, it comes to the same if you start from the top or the bottom.

127. خسنوي سپك مه گڼه په سترگو كښ به د پړوزي

Don't despise a blade of grass. It will get into your eye, (and see what it is like then.)

128. په سر كښ د مسواك دي په بغل كښ د خنجر

You have a tooth-cleaning stick in your hair, but a dagger under your arm.

cf :—

په خوله خور په زړه كور

Fair words but hate in the heart.

i. e. A hypocrite.

129. دَ خَوَارِ جِه كَمَدَخْنِي شِي بُهْ حَلَوَا كَشِي اَزْمِي سِي

When a poor man is out of luck, the least of his bad luck will be a thorn in his sweets.

i. e. Everything will go wrong.

130. خَوَكِ وَايِ جِه خَه خَوَرُو خَوَكِ وَايِ جِه خَه سِرِه خَوَرُو

Some ask what they will eat, others ask what they will eat with.

i. e. Rich and poor have their troubles.

131. چِه نِه كِي پِه شَا نِه دِ كِهْم جِه نِه خَوَزِي خَه دِ كِهْم

If you wont go I will carry you on my back, but if you wont eat, what on earth can I do then.

(cf :— You can take a horse to the water.. ...)

132. نِه پِچِيلِه خَوَرِي نِه هِي خَوَزِ دِي لِه وِر كِي

He neither eats it himself, nor will he give it to anyone else who will eat it.

(cf :— A dog in the manger.)

133 چه په خوښت كښې دې هغه په كتاب كښې نشته چه په كتاب كښې دې هغه په خوښت كښې نشته

What is in Khost is not to be found in books, and what is in books is not to be found in Khost.

(Note :— This is a jibe of the Turis at their uncouth Afghan neighbours in Khost.)

134 هغه د ټيري خوشا مند كړ دې هغه د بنګالي ټنگ دې

So and so is a flatterer of Teri, and so and so is a scoundrel of Bengal.

(Note :— The Khattaks of Teri are renowned for their flattery, and the Pathan hates and despises the Bengali.)

135 خپله خو لۀ بلا ده هم قلا ده

One's mouth is a calamity (when one talks too much) and a fort as well

(when one can hold one's tongue).

136. په دا وړو دى حوای چه عواری
With a tiny mouth like yours, how can you ask for anything ?
(Note —Said to a wife etc who keeps on asking for something) 137. حدرات په حپل وړاناب
Charity begins at home
138. اول خان پسى حوا
Self comes first, other people afterwards.
139. خان به دى ده مال
Is hfe best or wealth ?
140. په توه خديره شلى صم حور دري
One slap hurts twenty faces.
i e. The one who has been slapped enlists the sympathy of others and so the quarrel spreads
141. ه حسرت ددى خديچى نو سلى تد ده خه احوى
If the master eats (such bad food as) parched grain, what will he give his dog ?

142. کله دَ دادا او کله دَ بابا

Sometimes it is the father's turn sometimes the grand-father's. (The ups and downs of the world; every dog has his day.)

cf :— کله دَ دادا وار کله دَ ادبي وار

143. داغ په سپینو جامو لږي

A stain shows up on white clothes.

144. که زښتیا راشي نو د دروغو وطن به سوي وي

If the truth comes out, the land of lies will be burnt up.

cf :—

چه رښتیا راځي دروغو به کلي وران کړي وي

By the time that the truth comes out, lies will have destroyed many villages.

145. دَ دروغو لږه منزل وي

Lies go a short way.

cf —

د دروعو مری لدا وی

The course (string) of lies is short.

cf — A lie has no legs

146 د درنا لوی دی حمچه حمله ده

Though the sea be large, you have your own spoon

i.e. and that is all you'll get.

147 دهمی حس دی حوسنا نس دی

Your enemy is puny, but he is a match for you i.e. Never underrate an enemy, be he never so contemptible

148 د دنیا د ارهب دگوتی (نا لوتکی) دی

The world is the water pot used on a Persian wheel-well i.e. People come into and go out of this world duly like the water in a water pot on a Persian wheel-well which is continually being filled and emptied

149 که دنیا دیره شی اجر ده تیره شی

However much you gain of this world's goods, in the end they will pass from you.

150. په دنيا کيښ ماميز بي خلي نه وي

One can't get currants without stalks.

(cf:—No rose without a thorn.)

151. د دنيا کارونه په دنيا شي

Worldly work is accomplished by wealth.

(cf:—Money makes the world go round.)

152. دوست هغه دي چه په سختي کيښ د په کار راشي

A friend in need is a friend indeed.

153. د دم په ننداره شوه تارو وسو

A minstrel came into sight and the partridge was burnt. (Note:— A girl was cooking a partridge when a minstrel came along who attracted her attention, and so the bird was burnt.)

154. دم چه ډول وهي زوري لري

The drummer who beats the drum has the necessary strength for it.

1. e Everyone has the ability suited to his own particular calling.

155 دِمانو کله کله مسلی گوتهلی دی

Even Dams taste curds every now and again (Note :—Dams are a poor and despised caste of musicians, and curds are an expensive form of food) cf :—Every dog has his day.

156 د دِمانو کلی شده د دِمانو خلی شده

There are no villages of Dams—Boundary pillars are not built of dust.

(Note :—This expression is used to express disbelief in some preposterous statement.)

157. دِمی نه چا وبل چه نار دِ مِ شُ وِیل ی دِ کومی دوشی

Someone said to a dancing girl (prostitute) "Your lover is dead!"
"Of which street?" asked the lady,

(cf :— Every body's friend is nobody's true friend.)

158. اوبه چه ډنډي شي سخا شي
Stagnant water stinks.

159. راغلي پد کينس کيندوتي ډنډي وه په کينس پريوتي
You have got yourself nicely messed up in it. You have fallen into a pond (which you did not expect.)

(Note :—Said to those who presume, and ultimately get involved in some trouble.)

160 چه ډول په غاړه کړي د وهلو ي څه شرم دي
When a drum is hung round your neck there is no shame in beating it.

(Note :—Pathans consider singing, dancing, and the profession of a musician (dam) to be undignified. The moral is-Don't be above your work.)

161. د ډيوبي د کونډي لاند تياره وي
There is darkness under the lamp.

(cf :— The nearer the church the further from God.)

162. پُر اَدَدَهٗ نَهٗ سَپَهٗ اَوِ وِرَجِ نَوَرَدَمِي دَهٗ
Day and night are all the same to a blind man.

163. نَ پُر دَدُو پَهٗ مَحِ كَسِ ژِر پُر دِلِ نِي فَاَدَهٗ وَيِ
It is of no use weeping before the blind.

164. كِهٖ يَوَهٗ سَدَرَكَهٗ نَ پُر دَدَهٗ دَهٗ پَهٗ دِلِي لَاسِ كَدَرَدَهٗ
When you are blind in one eye put your hand over the other (to protect it).

1. e. Don't get caught the same way twice.

نَ سَمِي نَوَهٗ سَتَرَكَهٗ پُر اَدَهٗ شَيِ بَهٗ دِلِي نَا دِلِ لَاسِ كَدَرَدِي
cf :—

Blind in one eye, he puts his hand over the other. 1. e. To shut one's eyes to a thing.

165. پُر وَدَدِ پَهٗ حَيْلِ كَوْرِ هَهٗ نَوَشَدَرِي دَهٗ دِنَا نَ دِلِ پَهٗ كَوْرِ
A blind man knows his own house well, whereas the possessor of eyes knows not another's.

cf :—A fool knows more of his own house than a wise man of another's.)

166. زړوند ته گڼيدل دي

It is merely dancing to the blind.

cf :—

اوچن ته سارينده غږول دي

It is merely playing the lute to a camel.

i. e. It is shere waste of time.

167. زړوند د خدايه څه غواړي ؟ دوه سترگي

What does the blind man want ?

Two eyes !

(Note :— Said by one who is offered the thing he most desires. cf : Show the dog a rabbit !)

168. زړوند فارغه شوي يوه سوته خوري بلي ته سترگي وهي

You have become like a blind crow-

You eat one cow-pat with your eyes fixed on another.)

i. e. You are never satisfied.

169. زړوند گڼ پوري خاندي

A blind man laughs at a cripple.

170. نه هم د زانږو په فطار کس گری

So you, of all people, wander about in a flight of cranes (Note :—Said to one who ranks himself among those who are greatly his superiors.)

171. زر چه ناک وی له اوږی چه ناک وی

What fear of the fire has pure gold ?

i. e. The innocent have nothing to fear.

172. زر ورکه چه حاس شی بیا زر ډیر

Give him some money, and you will become a Khan - Then you will be rich.

173. سل ټک د زر مگر نو د اهدنگر

A hundred taps of a goldsmith are not equal to one blow of a blacksmith.

i. e. A brave man is a match for a hundred cowards.

174. زور د عمل کنده خدري

Physical strength rips open the stomach of common sense. e. g. Tricks in wrestling.

cf :—

زور دَ حساب کونہ شلوي

i. e. Force recognises not lawful claims.

175. کہ زور دَ زوراور شي کندو کنس غنم خپل شي

The wheat in the corn-bin is yours if you can get the upper hand.

176. چه په زور کنس ورسره نه يي برابر

د هغو په خوا کنس نه کنيدنه زرهوز

If you are not his equal in strength don't sit beside him off your guard.

177. که زوراور شي نو فصل سره پټي خپل شي

A brave man can take the fields as well as the crops.

178. رښتيا يا زوراور واپي يا کم عقل

Strong men and fools dare to tell the truth.

179. زوراور نه منخ کنس مه څه د قچر ورستومه څه

Go not in front of the brave nor behind a mule.

180. له پردی زوی نه خپله لور ښه ده

One's own daughter is better than somebody else's son. cf: A bird in hand.....

181. د زړې زوی نه کدو چه وشه به کلي کښ هرک کله وه

An old woman could not give birth to a son. When she did there was plague in the village that year (and the son died of it).

182. څه ژړنده وړانه (با پنځه) څه دانې (با غنم) لوندې
The mill is somewhat out of order, (or blunt) and the grain (or wheat) is rather damp.

i. e. There are faults on both sides.

183. هغه ژړنده جماعت نه پېژني

He is such a fool that he doesn't know a mill from a mosque.

184. له خوارۍ ژړنده ساني له مستي حق نه اخلي

From poverty he sits at the mill (watching other people's corn) but pride makes him refuse the reward he earns.

185. زرنده که د پلار ده خو په وار ده
Even if the mill belongs to your father you must wait for your turn.

i. e. First come first served.

186. د اوبو (يا غنمو) لار په زرنده وي
The way of the water (or wheat) is through the mill.

187. څه م شي په هغه سپرلي چه نه م سخې څري نه م وري

Of what use is the spring time to me when neither my calves nor lambs will graze ?

(Said by one who is unable to take advantage of a good opportunity.)

188. سپرلي دي تا په گنجي سر تړنبلې دي کلو نه
It is spring, and behold ! Your bald head is adorned with flowers.

(Said sarcastically to a 'sugar-daddy' with flowers stuck behind his ears, after the manner of Pathans)

189 د سډرو لډ کڼله چا کڼد نه دی عوررولی

No one throws away his cloak (beggar's) on account of ticks ۱ e No one will give up a great advantage because of a slight inconvenience)

190 د سډو کور په کور لډی ده خو پقدر نه بو دی

The dogs of every house are at feud with each other, but they are all united against the fāqir on the road

191 کومه دلا سپی نه معلومه ده هغه څه خبری نه معلومه ده ده

The master is not aware of the calamity of which his dog knows (cf —An old dog does not bark for nothing)

192 سنی ټمډری (نا عانی) کاروان ډرډری

The dogs are barking, while the caravan is passing (unconcerned)

193 ټور سپی خو سپی واپره سنی دی

A dog, whether it is black or grey, is all one and the same dog

194. خړ سپي د ليوه (يا كيدر) وروړ دي
The grey dog is the wolf's (or, jackal's) brother (cf: Chips of the same block).
195. سپي سړي د سپي خبري كوي
A man with a nature like a dog will speak like a dog.
196. د سپي عمر نه مرگ ښه دي
Aweel-Death is better than a dog's life.
197. د سپي لگي كه سل كال په درگي كښ ساتي سمه به نه شي
If a dog's tail were to be kept in a pipe for a hundred years, it would not become straight.
198. واي گده م له سپي نه خلاصه كړه د شرع په لاس م ور كړه
He says that he saved the sheep from the dog only to let the wolf have it.
(cf :—Out of the frying pan ...)
199. سپيندري سړه مه كوه سر به شي د واړه سړه مه كوه هير بهي شي
Don't lay yourself out over an old man they die, and young ones forget.

200 ورځه ورځه په مټکه د پده سدرگي د کړي دې د نورو دندونه

Get along with you-Go off to her! Fare thee well! You have been ogling other (women)

(Note - A wife's retort)

201. سدرگي د سدرگو نه سره مېري

He is brazen to the point of shamelessness

Also —

سدرگي له سدرگو سره مېري

Eyes are shy of eyes

202. د سحې مېله در مورې نوري وي ،

A calf can only run as far as the peg (to which it is tied)

203 سر په خپلو ونډو نه درېري

Hair does not make one's head any heavier

cf. — Peshawari

۱

سدرگي په نورو نه درېري

Eyelashes do not make one's eyes any heavier.

204. نه په سر تار لرم نه په غوړو کار لرم
I have not a hair on my head, nor have
I any further use for grease (hair-oil).

cf :—

کنجی په سر تار نه لري په چا کار نه لري

The bald man has not a hair on his head, nor does he require any one (to dress it).

i. e. A poor man is his own master.

205. سل من سر خوځوي د دوو گټو ژبه نه خوځوي
You wag your head which weighs about a hundred maunds, but you won't wag your tongue which is only the size of two fingers.

(Note :— This is used as a hint to a man who won't talk.)

206. سر د پاسه سر شته
There is always somebody (or something) higher up.

i. e. Every man has his master.

207. سَر دِ اسمان تَه رَسِيرِي اِرَعْقَل دِ پِيو لاندِ كَدِرِي

Your conceit reaches to the heavens, but your intelligence does not rise above your feet.

208. سَر دِ گل دِي بِيخِ دِ پِياز

Your head (face) is like a rose, but the rest of you is like an onion.

i. e. Good looks do not make up for a bad heart.

209. چَه سَرَقِي لَه كوره وي خونه ي توره وي

A domestic foe (tell-tale) ruins ones house.

210. چَه سَرِي زِرِي حِرصِ ي زِيانَدِرِي

As a man gets old his avarice increases.

211. پَه سل باندِ جوړدِرِي پَه يو باندِ ماتدِرِي

It is a hundred times more difficult to make a thing than to break it.

212. په سلو وهلي شي په يو ډر نه شي Be beaten a hundred times, but never have to admit that you are beat.

213. سړه جۀ بار شي بار يي خۀ وي
If a hare be made a beast of burden, what sort of load will it carry ?

214. بتوبتي اسمان نه بتبي ويولي ويل ي اسمان خما يه بتيو تبتک دي
A hare put its feet up into the air and said, "Look ! The sky is right up against my feet !"

215. له سيال سره سيالداري که له همزولي سره رازداري که Treat your own clansmen as your friends, but beware of your contemporaries (and rivals).

216. که ن اوو سيندونو شم پوري خنله برخه به وي راپوري
Even if I cross the seven seas (lit : rivers), my destiny will follow me (like a shadow).

i. e. There is no escape from one's destiny.

217. که شبۀ تبارۀ ده مدبری په شمار دی

Though the night is dark, the apples are counted.

i. e. There are some things which a man knows almost instinctively.

218. شوی ورناد و شوه که ن لک و نه ن کک

Whatever Fate had in store for him has happened; it matters not that he was rich or poor.

i. e. Fate spares neither the strong nor the weak.

219. شد تاره لوهی لوهی وی

Arable land is all clods of earth.

i. e. There are many more at home like you.

This is quite ordinary.

220. دنیا هیچا شل کرمی نه ده

The world (stands at nineteen), and no one has made it twenty. i. e. Man is never content, however much he may have.

221. په شَمَاه د شوم غاطد-په کور د درغام-ند د خړه وه نه د کته

I was deceived by the tail of your turban. I came to your house and found that you had no ass nor even a saddle. (This proverb is based on the story of a young man who used to pass the house of a certain young girl every day. From his appearance and the gold tail of his turban he appeared to be very wealthy. The girl fell in love with him and eventually ran away with him. When she came to his house she found that she had been deceived as he did not even possess an ass which even the poorest people have. This saying is now used of men who pinch and economise at home in order to keep up appearances abroad. The phrase, "Pa shamla e ma ghulega" is now commonly used to mean, "Don't be taken in by his outward show or appearance.")

222. په سړو سوږي وټ ماسو نه مي پوکل

Scalded by milk he blows on curds.

Also :—

ماز خوړلی د ټوپ نه ودرې

Bitten by a snake, he fears a rope.

(cf: A scalded cat fears cold water)

223. د شرم او د سخي يو شان (نمی)

The miser's and the generous man's accounts balance at the end of the year.

224. رڼه چه من شي بیاست پکار نه دی
او چه خوب راشی بالست پکار نه دی

When the heart is in love beauty is of no account ; and when one is sleepy a pillow is not necessary.

225. بیاسته د خدای هم خوښ دی

God too loves the beautiful.

(cf: Those whom the gods love die young.)

226. هغه نازوي چه په خان بنايسته نه وي
خوك يي څه كوي بنايست نه مور او نيا

If a girl is not good-looking herself, who cares a damn about her mother's or grandmother's looks?

cf: Every tub must stand on its own bottom.)

227. پټپي ابل سرپي ښه دي نه پوزار په پټپو كښن تنگ
بي پټشي سرپي ښه دي نه عدم په كور كښن چنگ

It is better to go bare-footed than to wear tight shoes.

(e.g. To suffer the discomforts of westernisation before one is ready for it.) It is better to be without a wife than to be continually fighting in ones home.

228. هره ښځه چه حجاب نه لري بي مالهي طعام دي مزه يي نشته

A woman without a veil is like food without salt unattractive.

229. ښځه چه نه چا له خاطر نه تديري په كال كښن دولس وار لښيري

A woman who cannot say, "No." has twelve babies a year.

i.e. A good natured fool.

Also.—

که دهنی سخی به کال کس دوه خلّ لدهری

Ill-starred women have two babies a year.

230. سخته د کلي حوسه ده که د حاوند حوسه ده

Should a wife be the idol of the people or of her husband ?

The answer is obvious. Implies that while in certain cases you must follow public opinion, there are others in which you must follow your own, e.g., in your own private affairs.

231. سخته دؤس نوئی دی

Woman is a poisonous creeper.

i.e. The very devil.

232. د یو سړي سخته لدهیده-لدهیده ده شوه یارانو ورنه

پسند وکړه چه کور د خه حال دی ؟ دوی و چه

یا نه دري شو یا نه د حصری شو

A man's wife was having a baby, but she could not give birth to it. His friends asked after his family, and he replied that either there would be three of them or he would go and live in the village guest house in case his wife died.

(Note:—The last phrase has become proverbial and has the signification of “Hobson's choice”.)

233. مېړونه غرونه دي او ښځې اړمونه دي

Men are mauntains and women are the levers that shift them.

234. د ښځې د هر ويښته لاند سل سل مکرونه دي

A woman has a hundred wiles hidden under every hair.

235. د ښځې مزدور

His own wife's slave. i.e. A henpecked husband.

236. د ښځې عقل تر پوندي لاند وي

A woman's intelligence is in her heels.

(c) ketabton.com: The Digital Library

i. e. She's slow in the uptake, and it occurs to her what she ought to have said when she has left the room.

Also :— دَ مَرْمِي عَقْل پَد سَدَّوَرُو كَس وِي

A slave's sense is in his ankles.

237. خَرَارِي لَه نُو كَدَّار لَارِي

Lark: at the first alarm (lit: blow) thou art gone.

(Note :—Said to one who is faint hearted.)

238. طَوَطِي دَ خَدَاي پَد كَمَچ (نَا وَرُوَرُو) مَو رَدِي

The parrot has the lion's share of God's treasury (or, munificence.)

i. e. Beautiful plumage, the ability to talk, long life etc. cf: To be born with a silver spoon in the mouth.

239. هَر خُدَّه لَارِشِي لَه سَوِي دَه عَادَت دَه خِي

Whatever else a man may lose he can not lose his habits.

Also :— هَر خُدَّه بَرُو عَادَت دَه نُو

240. عقل ن سڙي له گفتار نه معلوم ٿيڻي

The extent of a man's intelligence is known from his conversation.

241. عقل نه ڀه سر ڏي نه ڀه ڪال ڏي ن خپل فڪر ڀه ڪمال ڏي

Common-sense is not in one's head, nor does age bring it.

It is the result of considered thought.

242. غار ڏي ڀه غارونو ڪنن نور غارونه وي

It is a cave, and there are always caves within caves. (cf: Wheels within wheels.)

243. ڀه هر غار (يا سوڙي) ڪنن گڙي مه منڍه هسي نه وي چه مار ن وڇوري

Don't put your hand into every hole or you'll be bitten by a snake.

244. نت يي مينڇ ن رت ڏي

You are fat and hollow inside. i. e. Impotent, chicken hearted etc.

Also :—

هسي تش ڪڍوي

You are like an empty pumpkin.

245. که عز لورویِ خو په سر می لدار وی

Even though the hill be high there will be a road at the top.

(cf Every cloud has a silver lining.)

Also :—

که عز لوی دی به سر می لار ده

Though the mountain be high there is a road to the top.

i. e. There is no one so great as to be beyond control

246. خه ور (نا لاس) پناه خه عز پناه

It comes to the same thing if it is hidden by a door (or hand) or by a mountain.

(cf : A miss is as good as a mile.)

247. چه لدر عز درې هغه کم وز درې

Thunder clouds seldom bring rain.

Also :—

چه عز درې نه وز درې

248. تل پردی سل کوروده وړان کړې دپل یو کور

اناد نه کړې

A thief destroys a hundred houses, but he cannot make his own house flourish.

249. دَ غَلِّ خَاطِي پِه غَر كَمِش نَشْتِه

A mountain is no place for a thief.

250. چِه تَمَل نَه يَبِي دَارِ دِرِي پِه خَه

If you be not a thief of what are you afraid ?

Also :— چِه غَل نَه يَبِي كُنْدِه دِ مَه رِ دِرْدِه

251. غَاة تَه وَايِي لَهْه سَاد تَه وَايِي نَيْسَه

He tells the thief to steal and the householder to catch him.

(cf: Run with the hare and hunt with the hounds.)

252. غَلْبِيلِ كُوزِي تَه رُو چِه سُوْرِي بُوْرِي

The sieve said to the water-pot, "You are all holes!"

Also :—Peshawari :—

غَلْبِيلِ كُوزِي تَه رُو چِه تَا كَمِش دَوَه سُوْرِي دِي

(cf: The pot calling the kettle black.)

(c) ketabton.com: The Digital Library
 253. عم بهادی خور او ورور دی

Grief and happiness are brother and sister.

i. e. Go hand in hand.

254. ما به دی سدرگو لددلی وج عدم ولاړ سنه رودای

With my own eyes have I seen ripe wheat standing, and the green crops reaped.

i. e. A young man's death etc.

255. عوا پسی ستهی وی حبل وی که بردی وی

There is always a calf behind a cow, sometimes her own and sometimes another's.

256. که راعله عوا په بیی که لاړه عوا بردی

If a stray cow comes along to be milked it is mine; if it runs away it is somebody else's.

i. e. If a stray cow comes along and allows me to get a free pail of milk, I'll take it as mine for the time being. If not, well, the cow did not belong to me so I lose nothing.

(cf: Heads I win, tails you lose.)

257. په ډيرو قصابانو کښن غوا مرداره شي

When there are too many butchers the cow dies before it has been lawfully slaughtered (according to the Muhammadan law.)

cf: Too many cooks.....

258. غوښل د مورې په زور کوزي

On the stake in the middle depends the threshing.

(Note :—Everyone is familiar with the spectacle of half a dozen bullocks yoked to a pole which turns on a central stake, treading out the corn.

This saying is used with reference to one who relies for success on a powerful friend.)

259. غورې که توي شول په تالي کښن توي شول

Even when the ghi is spilt it falls into the brass dish (of his scales.)

(Note :—Said of a bunniah who, when weighing gh lets some of it spill. The saying is now used of people who are always fortunate, even when some mishap befalls them.)

260. حره سکر کھل عورو نه می نابلل

The ass tried to get horns and lost his ears.

(Note :—Applied to those who, not content with what they have got, seek more, and lose everything.

cf : Be thankful for small mercies).

261. که فصاب نه عوسه اخلی نو خرخوی نه بی حره

You can buy meat from a butcher, but you will never sell it.

i. e. An amateur can never compete with an expert.

Also :—

فصاب نار له هم هدیوکی وړکوی

(Note :-Butchers are said to be cunning rogues and do not even spare their friends.)

262. غوڻبه به ن هرجا خوبه وي خو پيشو پر ايمان راوري دي

Everybody likes meat but a cat simply worships it.

263. غوڻبي که وسوزي ببا هم له ساگو نه بني وي

Burnt meat is better than vegetables.

Also:—

غوڻبي که وسوزي ببا هم له پيڻي نه بني وي

264. خپله غوڻبه وسکوڼده ن بل هم دا شان خورږي

Pinch yourself to find out how much it hurts others.

265. په غلو کښن چه خومره لرگي وهي بوڼس ي زياتږي

The more you stir up filth the more it smells.

266. د فقير چه چرته ښه وي هلته ي شپه وي

A beggar spends the night wherever he is welcome.

(cf: Beggars can't be choosers.)

267. یو ساځی سل کل عمر د فیل په غوږ کس ندر کړ چه کوم وحب بلو فیل نه ی ژو چه ره خم فیل ژو چه ره سنا په تلو راتلو نه یم حدر

A mosquito lived for a hundred years in an elephant's ear. When he was about to leave, he said to the elephant, "I'm off now!"

"I know nothing of your coming and going", he replied.

Also .-

نو ماشی د انی په غوږ کس شپه نده کړله ویل ی چه ماما
ره حوحم انی ویل چه نه د به راتلو حدریم او نه د په بلو حدر یم

(Note:—The Elephant's reply has become proverbial and is used as a snub to a bumptuous non-entity.
cf. no : 43.)

268. هغه سپی دومره دناوح دی چه نو فیل د هغه دناو نه شی وړلی

He is so proud that an elephant could not carry his pride.

269. قارغە ۋېل چە خما سپىنە زويە ششكى ۋېل چە خما پوستكىه زويە

The crow talks of its white son, and the hedgehog of its soft-skinned offspring.

i. e. Everyone extols his children for the qualities they don't possess.

270. ەفت شراب قاضي ھم خيشاي دي

Even the Qazi drinks wine that is free.

(Note: Wine is unlawful to the orthodox Muhammadan.)

271. چە مېوي يى د كابل خورلي نە وي د ھغە تر فھم ۋسكي وي گورگري

He who has not tasted the fruits of Kabul thinks sloes as good as raisins.

(cf :— Where ignorance is bliss.....)

272. كە پە كارم نە راخي نامه ي نە راخي

If a thing is of no use to me I don't even want to know its name.

273. چہ پہ کاسی کس ی را کوی پہ غلسل کس ی واجوہ حہ توبی سہی

Put what you give me on a plate into a sieve so that it may fall through.

i. e. Thank you for nothing-I am not in need of your favours.

274. خوری دا کال نہ کوی حدای تدر خو سنا سوی پتون نہ م نہ شی ہدر

Sister! This year will pass but I will never forget your burnt thigh.

• (Note: This is with reference to the well-known story of a brother who visited his sister during a famine year.

The lady happened to be cooking chuppaties, and fearing that he might ask her for some food, of which they had very little rapidly took the hot slab of dough off the griddle and hid it under her thigh, but she had not time to hide the griddle too. Her brother noticed this when she said that they had no food in the house, moreover the chuppaties very soon burnt her, and she could not help jumping up and giving the secret away. Sometime afterwards the brother again visited his sister who welcomed him, and in the course of conversation mentioned the famine year.

The brother's reply has become proverbial.

This saying is used to emphasise any unforgettable incident and also to emphasise help declined or an old grievance.)

275. کازمې ډير ډي خو کار په سیر تمام ډي

There are lots of stones, but only those of a seer's weight are needed (to use as weights).

276. که منځني په کازمې يا کازمې په منځني وهي خبره يوه ده

If you hit a pitcher with a stone or a stone with a pitcher it comes to the same in the end.

277. فارعاً د ساروډی تله رده کول بدل بر ده هدر شول

The crow in imitating the gait of the maina forgot his own.

(Note — Said of anyone who becomes Europeanised or Indianised and drops his own language and customs)

278. پردی کپ د ند و سپو وی

One can only spend half the night on someone else's bed

(Note — This is used as a cautionary reminder to someone who borrows anything, and means that he cannot keep it for good and all.)

278 د کرمی په ور نحو مه غلطره او د دنگرهار په منډو

Don't be deceived by Kurram's clouds nor by the young men of Ningrahar.

(Note — The clouds on the Safed Koh are notoriously deceptive, and the feud between the Turis of Kurram and their northern neighbours of Ningrahar has made them look on the young men of that province as being as unreliable as the rainfall of their own country.)

280. په هر چا خپل وطن کشمیر د یې
Everyone thinks his own country Kashmir.

281. چيندځه د اوښ په پچي (يا لوتڼه) وخته ويل ي چه کشمیر م وليدو

A frog climbed on to a piece of camel's dung (or a clod of earth) and cried
"I have seen Kashmir!"

(Note :—Said of a man who is blowing his own trumpet.)

282. يا به کلال غيبي يا به د للمي کر

He must either ruin a brick-maker or a farmer of Lalmi.

(Note :—This is with reference to the Turi story of a brick-maker who prayed God for sunshine to dry his bricks at the same time as a farmer of Lalmi village (i. e. a village whose lands are dependent on rainfall) prayed for rain to water his crops.

Lalmi zmaka also means unirrigated land.)

283. حوک می پد کلی کس نه پرددی دی وای حه وسله م حان کړه کدرده

The man who is not even allowed into the village is the one who says, "Take my arms to the Khan's house!"

284. له کلی وړه له اړده می مه وړه
Forsake your village, but not its ancient manners and customs.

285. کم عقل دومره پد دل نه کا لکه هوبهار پد چپل خان
A fool would not have made such a fool of anyone else as a clever fellow (like you) have made of yourself.

- Also :— کم عقل دومره پد دل نه کا لکه نه چپل خان
A fool does not do so much (harm) to another as he does to himself.

286. نَ يوكم عقل نه په کوز کيس ستن ورکه شوه لټوله ي په بازار کيس

A fool lost a needle in his house and looked all over the bazar for it.

287. کنډه چه مېړه کا نو په وخت ي ولي نه کا
If the widow intends remarrying, why doesn't she do it at once ?

(cf :— A stitch in time..... ..)

288. کنډه ن ليور په طمع شوه ن جمله مېړونو ووته
The widow through hopes of (marrying) her brother-in law missed a whole heap of husbands.

Also :— کنډه چه ن ليور په طمع شوه ن ورو ووته

The widow hoped that her brother-in-law would keep her (but he didn't), and the harvest was over (so she could not go out gleaning for herself.)

(cf :— To fall between two stools.)

289 کنډه بېتخه په يو کت دوه خوبونه وينې

A widow dreams a double dream on her lonely bed.

1. e. First of the late-lamented, and again of her next love.

290. ناری د کلهی سه ده لکه په نوی ستمی پخپله حج ده ده حی

A widow is good to love for a calf won't go into the yoke

291. د حمار کور حه سکا وه حه نازاں وسه نور سکا شه
The tanner's house was filthy, and when it rained it became worse still.

(cf. —Piling Ossa on Pelion.)

292. ده کور کس نو پر دارو نه لری تلار ده وای حه ما ده نو په واحله

He has not got enough powder for one cartridge in the house and yet he asks his father to buy him a cannon.

(Said of one who boasts of his family etc cf : with 283.)

293. ده کور دایی ده لری په ژروده کس وار نسی

He has not got a grain in the house, and yet he books a turn at the mill. (Making a vain show.)

294. سل روپي پور که د ژمي شپه په کوز که

Borrow even a hundred rupees, but spend a winter's night in your own home.

(A Turi saying. The winter in Kurram is very severe.)

295. کونړ ته نغاړه وهل فائده نه لري

It is of no use beating a drum to a deaf man.

Also :— اوښ ته سارینده غږول دي

It is like playing the harp to a camel.

(cf :— To cast pearls before swine.)

296. کونړ په یوه خبره دوه ځل خاندې

A deaf man laughs twice.

i. e. First when he sees other people laughing, and again when he realises what has been said.

297. د کوهي خاوره په کوهي لږي

The clay of the well is expended on the well.

i.e. It takes all the earth excavated from a well to fill it up again. Said of a profit which is expended on the source from which it was derived.

298. که خوک دل به کوهی کنی همه پخپله به کس در روزی

Who digs a pit for another falls into it himself.

Also :—

د دل په لار کس مه کنه کوهی حری پخپله به د لار شی
Don't dig a pit in another's path, perchance you may go by the same road yourself.

299. کوزی په خوند د به نم په خوږ د نم

Oh carrot ! I am not so pleased with your flavour as with the noise made in crunching you up.

(Note:—Said of things which are not so enjoyable in themselves as in the effect produced by them on others.)

300. پنځه واره نکتي په خواه مه منډه

Don't cram all five fingers into your mouth at once. i. e. Behave yourself! Pathans consider it elegant and genteel, when eating, to insert the tips of two, or at the most, of three fingers into the mouth. The sight of the average Englishman eating with his fingers is revolting and nauseating. Pathans are often surprised that they have such bad "table-manners".

This saying also has the force of—"Dogs that put up many hares kill none."

301. څوک مه وهه په نکتي تا به نه وهي په لتي

Never lay a finger on anyone, and then you won't be kicked

302. دا نگر دا ميدان

Here you are! This is a yard (36 inches) and this is a plain. i. e. Show your prowess!

(Note :—This was said to a Pathan who boasted of having done a tremendous long-jump whilst in India. It is now used as a retort to any kind of boasting cf :—The proof of the pudding.. ..)

303.

گول به صنوبر صنوبر په گل څه وکړل

What did Gul do to Sanobar, and what did Sanobar do to Gul ?

(Note :—This refers to the well-known story of a most lovely princess of Tartary, who announced that she would marry the first suitor who could answer this question correctly. If, however, they failed to do so, their heads were forfeit ! Many tried to win the lady, and the battlements of her castle were decorated with the heads of the Failed B. A's (Bachelors of Adventures).

Our hero, whose six brothers had lost their heads in the fruitless quest, was a really beautiful Prince.

After a series of the most incredible adventures, hair-breadth escapes, and sanguinary battles, all of which were of a very high standard of blood-pressure, he succeeded in finding the correct solution to the problem.

Whereupon he returned in triumph and married the Tartar as well as several other beautiful ladies he had run into during his travels.

The saying is now used in the hujras as a riddle and elicits the reply, "Ask me another!"

The really inquisitive, who burn to know what Gul and Sanobar really did to each other, will find the whole story in a pamphlet in Urdu entitled 'Gul-o-Sanobar' published by Shaikh Barkat Ali & Sons Booksellers, Kashmir Bazar Lahore.)

304.

هر چرته چه گل وي يو ازغبي ورسره مل وي

Every rose has a thorn as its friend

Also :— کَلْ نَبِي اَرَعِي بَد وِي

Every rose has a thorn.

305. گَلونَد وِدرِه چَه سَلک در تَه گَلزار سَبِي زوران مَه کَرِه شِيو کَسَر، بَد دِ لَپَر شِي

Cultivate roses and your land will become a rose garden.

Don't plant thorns they will stick into your feet.

306. کَنجِي لَه خدایي نَوکِي وِر مَه کَرِه دَ سَر دَنخ دَه اَداسِي

May God never give a bald headed man nails, or he will scratch his head to pieces.

(cf :—Put a beggar on horseback and he will ride to the devil.)

307. دَ کَنجِي يورَت رات وِي

The bald headed always have one extra sense.

(Note :—They are generally supposed to be very wicked.)

308. که گور گران دِي دَ مَرِي نَا کَام دِي

Though the grave be a terrible thing, the corpse must grin and bear it.

309. خپل گور هر چاته تښک ښکارېږي

Everyone thinks his own grave too small for him.

(cf :—Every horse thinks his own pack the heaviest.)

310. هغه که دَ گوي زېن جوړوي نو به ي جوړ کوي

If he wants to make a saddle out of gurr (molasses) he'll do it.

i. e. He's a wonder and can do anything.

311. هسار گيدر دَ مزي په مقابله جذبېږي

A jackal at bay fights like a tiger.

Also :— پيشو هم په خپل کور کيس همزي وي

Even a cat is a lion in its own home.

(cf :— Every cock fights best on its own dunghill.)

312. گدږ هومره د سادې ده چه خو نور حذلی ده دی

Oh jackal ! Your nuptial pleasures last till the sun has risen.

(cf — Every dog has his day.)

313. دو گدږ نارې وهی او بل نه وهی د — ولسده ی حذی

One jackal howls, another does not—His hair just stands on end

314 د گدږ واده دی

It is only a jackal's wedding.

(Note — This is used to describe a slight shower of rain when the sky is fine The mating of jackals is popularly supposed to be of short duration.)

315 مږه گنده فارسی وای

A full stomach speaks Persian (instead of Pashto)

i. e The man gives himself airs for good feeding makes a man arrogant.

An Indian bearer when he has received his pay may be heard to remark, "Ham kuchh care about nahin karta."

316. دَ نِکِیڊِي اِخوند دِي

He is a glutton.

317. لاس چِه مات شي غاري له خي

When the arm is broken the hand goes to the shoulder. i. e. When down in the world one turns to one's friends.

318. لاس دَ بري کار دِي

Might is right.

319. سل په لاسي پوري يوه مي دَ بندو

When you spend a hundred (Rupees etc.) on your best girl, you might just as well spend one more on bracelets for her. (cf :— Don't spoil the ship for a ha'porth of tar.)

320. که لري هر خومره پخوي خوند مي غشوين وي

However much you cook tripe it will still taste horrible. (cf.— Sour grapes can never make sweet wine)

321. لِر وِر كَد دِد وِكِيَه Give a little (in the name of God) and you will gain a lot.

(cf.— The charitable give out at the door, and God puts in at the window.)

322 لَسْكَر كِه دَ پَلار وِيِه م دِ دِي Even if the lashkar belongs to your father it is an evil thing.

i. e It is very expensive to keep.

323. لَعْل پَد اِدو كَس دِه پَدِ دِي
A ruby will not remain hidden amongst ashes.

(cf.— Murder will out.)

324 لَدِيِي حَلال دِه دِي سادَك ي وِر دِه دِنار دِلوِي دِي
The short-tailed ox had not even been slaughtered when a man came along with a tray on his head to take the meat away.

cf:— Don't count your chickens before they are hatched.)

325. لنديي كه د غودال په ورځ پيدا شه نو هو ورك نه دي

If the short tailed (ox) returns on the day of threshing it has not gone for good.

(cf:—“It is not lost if it comes at last”.
or, “All is well that ends well.”)

326. لنديي غوايي په لوريه وڅېزه چه څه د عزيزان كوي هغه ته هم كوه

Oh short-tailed ox! Go up on to the high ground (and look around) and do as your kinsmen do.

(cf:— In Rome do as the Romans do.)

327. لور هم د كور او زوم هم د كور

He wants me to provide him with a son-in-law as well as a daughter-in-law.

(A preposterous request. cf:—Like the tailor who sewed for nothing and provided the thread himself.)

328. اوس ته جا ويل چه لوريه سه ده که ژوره ويل می چه لعنت په دواړو

Someone said to a camel, "Is uphill best or downhill?" He replied, "Confound them both!"

(cf:—It is six of one and half a dozen of the other.)

329. هر يو لوسى چه خوړدري مالدري

Every plate that is made breaks.

(Note:—This is used to express the transitory nature of life.)

cf:— سور د پړيو تو دی

330. لوشی د قام دد غوسدل سر می په دریاب
(یا په اولو کس) وچ شه

The bulrush was not a well-wisher of its own kind, and lo! though its feet stand in water, its head is dried up.

Note:—This is a condemnation of lack of patriotism, esprit-de-corps etc.

331. لو کړي نه چه کار نه کړي لوز په لوته تېروي
A reaper when he cannot work, sharpens his sickle with a clod of earth.
(cf:— A bad workman quarrels with his tools. The latter part of the sentence also means, he wastes his time.)
332. هر سوي پوزه توزه کړي چه زه لوهار یم
Any one can blacken his nose and say that he is a blacksmith. (Said of the vain-glorious.)
333. که ته کړي سمې چاري تا به څوک نه نيسي په لياري
If you behave yourself nobody will interfere with you.
(cf:—A clear conscience is a coat of mail.)
334. په ليلي هر څوک مين دي که ليلي په چا مينه شي Every one is in love with Laila : in the hope that Laila would fall in love with someone (but she did not.) (Laila was the daughter of an Arab prince. In vain did all the nobles of the land seek her hand. She had given her heart to Majnun and remained faithful to him till death.

i. e. A wish alone is not enough to achieve ones object. cf: "If wishes were horses, beggars would ride.")

335. هونديار نه اشاره ده لدوبي نه دنده ده
A hint is enough to the wise, but a fool needs a stick.

cf :— اصل له اشارت کم اصل له کونک

336. مار که سؤري لره ورشي برادر شي
نه دگور په عاړه راغلي نه شوي سم

When a snake approaches his hole he straightens out ; whereas here are you on the brink of the grave and you do not straighten out.

(A rebuke to an old sinner.)

Also :—

مار که خه کور خي چه سوري ته ورشي سم نه شي

Although a snake wriggles and curls along the road, when it comes to its hole it will straighten out.

337. هغه د لستونډي عمار دي

He is a snake in the sleeve.

338. چه سري د عمار وي که چرمينکي وي سري په تيره ولا

Throw a stone at anything with a head like a snake, even if it be a lizard.

339. په پودي لس عمار هم نه وژنه

Don't kill even a snake with the hand of another.

i. e. See to everything yourself.

340. هغه عمار په دينم وژني

He gets his enemy to kill snakes for him.

i. e. He gets any one to do his dirty work for him

341. تور مار يي ورستو نه وهنه کوي

You are a black snake (cobra); you strike from the back.

342. مارغه دانه ويني او لومنه نه ويني

The bird sees the grain but not the snare.

i. e. Avarice makes one blind.

343. هر مارتہ ہرہ می حالہ دو حدر نہ دی د دل د حال

Every bird has its own nest, and no one of them knows about the others.

(c. f. One half of the world knows not how the other half lives)

344. چرگت د مالقی پہ خکلو خہ دوهیری

What does a fowl know of the flavour of salt.

(cf : -Pearls before swine).

345. د هعد منداری دلیری

He is very lucky and everything turns out well for him.

346. تاثر له مجلس دی

A man is known by the company he keeps.

347. هعد د منج نه کم وناسی

So and so is such a skinflint that he takes butter off a fly.

348. دَ هري مَچِييَ نَخل شات نه وي

Every bee's excrement is not honey.
(cf :—All is not gold that glitters.)

349. سلو عمرغانو ته يوه تيږه کاږي ده

One stone is enough to drive away a hundred birds.

cf :— سل پاپو دَ يو لور

350. مرگ نه په وارو دمي نه په زارو

Death is not for the young, nor for the old (but for all).

(cf :—“Death devours lambs as well as sheep”.)

351. عربيي چه کا کا شي سري لوي شي

When a slave is called ‘uncle’ (i. e. becomes old) he gets a swollen head.

352. عربيي که دَ سرو وي کنه بي دَ جستو وي

Though a slave be of gold, his bottom is of copper.

(That is, he will not be gold all through. cf :—“He has a yellow streak". Also, "Blood tells in the end.")

353. مربی شری نه مونداه حه و می موندله نوومی چه شل نگر نه ده

A slave could not get a blanket and when at last one was given to him, he complained that it was not twenty yards long.

cf:—Don't look a gift horse in the mouth.

354. مربی هم په قصی سئه

So a corpse has begun to talk !

(Note:—Said of any notably silent member of a party who suddenly becomes voluable.)

355. مربی نر نه کوی که نر کوی کهن شلوی

A dead man speaks not, if he does, well, he tears his shroud.

(Said of a quiet or modest person who when he does speak has no shame and spares no one. cf :—Still waters run deep.)

356. مزرِي پِه پَنجَرِه كَنيس هَم مزرِي دِي

A tiger is a tiger even inside a cage.

357. مَزِيَه اِمانت نِه كويِ خانت (خِيانت)

The ground never plays false with a corpse that has been entrusted to it.

(Note :—It is a common belief amongst Pathans that if on burying a corpse, the ground be verbally charged with its care, it will be preserved in a perfect state until it can be given a proper interment. Most commonly done after a battle when the dead are given hasty burials. The words used are to this effect :—“Oh earth! I entrust this corpse to thy keeping for so long, when I shall require it of thee safe and sound.” First hand evidence has been obtained of a corpse that was exhumed two months after burial in this manner, in perfect condition, with, moreover, the hair and nails grown.)

358. معَل پد دمعانو زور وکړ دهغانو پد حرو زور وکړ

Afghan soldiers are cruel to the villagers who in turn are cruel to their donkeys.

359. معَل حقلی په دی نه پد کور کس مدام حدت

It is better to raid into Afghanistan than to wage continual wars in one's own country.

360. د حوار ملا پد نادت حوک کلمه هم نه دبروی

When an impecunious Mulla calls (to prayers), no one even repeats the creed.

(Note:—On hearing the Azan (the call to prayers) all Muslims repeat the creed. The proverb means that no one pays any heed to a poor man.)

361. مولا په خپلې لور وډیرېږي

A Mulla is afraid for his own daughter.

(Note:—A Mulla's daughter seldom inherits her father's pious nature, and no one knows better than he the number of bad-hats in the village.

362. مولا خڅېل ته نه ځي، ځایو جماعت ته نه ورځي

A Mulla does not go to the jungle, nor a bear to the mosque.

Also :—

مولا له جماعت نه وزي او بلا جماعت له نه ورځي

The Mulla does not leave the mosque nor the devil go into one.

i. e. Each minds his own business.

364. خُورک و لولیی مَلا شیی خُورک و لولیی بلا شیی

Some get educated and become Mullas;
others go to the bad.

365. مَلا مار دی نَ خوانانو کار دی
مَلا تالیی دی هم مَ زوی هم مَ نوسی دی

“ Mulla ! Here is a snake ! ”

“ That is a matter for brave lads ! ”

“ Mulla ! Here is a dish of food ! ”

“ Well, my son, my grandson, and my self are ready for that ! ”

(Note:—Originally used to illustrate the cowardice and greed of Mullas, but now applied to all who possess these failings.)

366. مَلا مَلا نه یی سَاکُردانو پد هوا کوی

You're no Mulla ! Your pupils have given you a swollen head.

367. مَذَرک پد سُوَره نَفوسیی نه شَه پد کَنه پوری ی حم و نولو

(Notwithstanding the fact that) the rat could not get into its hole, it (went and) tied a winnowing basket to its tail.

(Note:—Said of poor people who encumber themselves with unnecessary expenses.)

368. د مذکور چہ مرگ راشی نو لار تہ راشی

A snake comes to the road to die.

Also:—

د مار چہ اجل راشی نو پہ لاری برابر شی

(Note:—Said of outlaws etc, who are caught in British India.)

369. د مذکور لندی کوم موم نہ کو

I cut the snake's tail off, but did not kill it.

(Note:—This is used to express partial success.)

370. د تش مذمی اواز بنہ خیزی

An empty vessel makes much noise.

371. دَ مُوتَمِي دِياسَه مَد رَسَه

Don't reap above the closed hand.

i. e. practise the right way of working.

(cf:—Don't put the cart before the horse.)

372. لَه نَشْتَه مَرُوْدِي بَه دِي كَب پَر نَك دِي

A hen-pecked husband, who does at any rate fill the bed is better than none at all.

(cf:—Half a loaf is better than none.)

373. دَ وِرُو كِي هَلَك (با كودَمَت) پَه زَنَه حَيْلَه مَرور پُوغَدِي

The prattle of a little child is only understood by its mother.

374. جَد هَلَك وَد زِرِي مَرور دِي نَه وَرَكِي

The baby is not suckled till it cries.

(cf:—A closed mouth catcheth no flies.)

375. لور له مور زوي له پلار معلوميري

A girl takes after her mother, and a boy after his father.

Also :—

لکه مور هسي لور زکه جرنده هسي دوره

As the mother so is the daughter; as the mill so is the flour.

376. چه نه د وي د مور داسي مه وابه چه ورور

Don't call anyone 'brother' who is not the son of your mother, i. e. Be careful whom you trust.

377. چه مور ميره شي پلار پلندر شي

With the arrival of a step-mother, the father becomes a step-father.

378. په شاهدي کښ مزلئي خرخوي

You sell raddishes in Shahi (village).
(cf :—To carry coals to Newcastle).

379. لکه عملي کښ تور سپين

Like the black specks in a grain of pulse (which is white.)

(Note :— This is used to describe very small proportion.)

380. میا شت اوله (یا ورندی) درخ کنی شی
One can see the moon on the first of the month.

(Note :— The Muhammadan year is lunar. This saying has the force of, 'All in good time.')

381. میا شت پد کده نه پتدیری
You can't hide the moon with a finger.
(cf :— Murder will out.)

382. میا شت گوره کال پیر ندسه
Look at the month and judge the year thereby.

i. e. Coming events cast their shadows before them.

383. ن مدیری زوی مدبرو پسی خی ن وری وزو پسی
The lamb follows the sheep and the kid the goat.

(cf :— Birds of a feather... ..)

384. مَیډرېي ته لږي اوبه درياب وي .

A very little water is a sea to an ant.

Also :—

مَیډرېي ته پچه هم پدچومي دي

Even a piece of sheep dung is a hill to an ant.

385. د مَیډرېي چه خداي په بدو شي نو وزري وکړه

When God wishes to destroy the ant, he gives it wings.

(cf :— To give a man a rope to hang himself.)

386. په پردې کور سل میلمانه هیڅ دي

What does it matter if there are a hundred guests in someone else's house ?

cf :—To cut large thongs of another men's tethers.

387. د میلانو په بیره د کاله څه شي

What attention does the host pay to the fact that his guests are in a hurry ?

(Note :— Anyone who has sampled Pathan hospitality will appreciate the truth of this remark.)

388. معلمه کور نه شولې سه دى نه په گنده ده.

Better to drive the guest from the house than to go hungry one self.

A Turi saying which few Pathans accept.

Also :— نا وقت معلمه د آسمان ډډر دى

The unexpected guest is a thunder-bolt
(a bolt from the blue.)

389. مده ساعه په ساعه راتدرې لکه راتدرې د سپانانو ماحدوده

Love increases from hour to hour like a sepoy's pay.

390. که نای نه وي نو سپړی نه جا بکلی

If there were no barber, who would pick out the ticks ?

(Note — This is a Yusufzai saying. Yusufzais often wear their hair long at the back of the neck, and so are commonly worried by ticks, which it is the barber's business to remove. Every village has its own barber, whom each villager pays-not in money-but one pound out of every eighty of the grain that he harvests.)

391. نَر زوي په رُونږي کښم معلومېږي
One can tell a promising (lit. male) son even in his swaddling clothes.
(cf :--“The child is father of the man”.)
392. د نس غولې ژور دي
The belly's courtyard is capacious.
(That is, there is no satisfying it.)
393. چه نښتر زړېږي گوړي پي کښي ته لېږي
When a fir tree gets old, its sap goes to the bottom.
(Note :— This is said of old people in their dotage.)
394. چه چرته خي خپل نصيب به وړي
Wherever you go your destiny will follow you.

395. په سپو خو د څه نکرېزې نه ذې لېوې

Have you put henna on your feet ?

i.e. Why are you lagging behind ?

(Note :—Said to one who won't walk quickly : henna is put on the feet to beautify them and also to cool them. Therefore a man with henna on his feet will walk slowly and carefully so that it may not be rubbed off.)

396. د خولې نوړې خو نه ده

It is not a morsel of food.

(That can easily be gulped down. Said of a difficult task. cf :—Rome was not built in a day.)

397. چې نوک خاېې کړې نو سوک پر منډې

Once he finds room for his nail, he'll shove his whole fist in.

(cf :— Give him an inch.....)

398. ښک عمل به د بادشاه کړې بد عمل به د رسوا کړې

Virtue will make you a king; evil will disgrace you.

399 هر چا سره نيكبي كوه خو خپلو سره نيكبي مه كوه

Do everyone a good turn except your own relatives.

i. e. They will only take it for granted and will not even thank you for it.

400. وده نه پس نكړيزي په كښي ولگوه

After the wedding put the henna on your backside !

Also :— اختر چه تير شي نكړيزي په ديوال وتپه

When the festival (Id) is over, plaster the wall with henna.

(Note : --The former refers to the well-known story of the villager, who asked a friend, who was going to town, to buy him some henna, as a wedding was going to be held in the village. On such occasions they don their best clothes and anoint their fingers with henna. The man was delayed in the town and returned two or three days later, and said to his friend, "I've done your commission—here is the henna !" His friend's reply has become proverbial, and is used as a retort to anyone who does a thing too late to be of any use. Frequently only the first part of the saying is used—"Wāduh na pas!"

401. واده ماده نه و د سلو روپو ډول ډزه شه
There was no wedding and a hundred rupee drum broke.

i. e. Every thing went wrong.

402. پد سترگو مې وارنه را اوږدې ده
His eyes are bunged up with fat.

i. e. He is too proud to recognise his old friends.

403. له وږو مې نه وارده ورسئ
To take the fat off a flea.

i. e. A skinflint.

404. وځو پورې داند هم ورسو
The green wood was burnt as well as the dry.

i. e. A holocaust - Also, the innocent suffered with the guilty.

405. اوزي او نوک نه سره جدا کيږي
The nail and the flesh about it do not separate.
cf :—Blood is thicker than water.

406. ورندي د ورستي پل دي
The man in front is a bridge for the man behind.
i. e. Sets an example.

407. که ورور د خپل وي چه په راز د بل وي له هغه نه دینمن بنده دي
It is better to have an enemy than a brother who prefers someone else's society.

408. وزري خوري به کړو حسب تر مينځه
We will remain brother and sister, but some sort of account must be kept.
i. e. Business first, then friendship.

409. ته م وزي وهه زه به د روژي وهم Break my prosperity (lit. kill my goats) and I'll break Thy fast!
(The shepherd here threatens God in the words of the proverb, for the loss of his goats. Fasting in the month of Ramzan is one of the five pillars of Islam and so he thinks that by this means he will be able to annoy God. (cf : Tit for tat.)

410. دَ وِزِي نَظَرِ پَه دَسَدِرْخَوَانِ وِي

A hungry man keeps his eyes on the dining table.

411. دَ وِزِي نَرِ عَوْرَ نَ رَوْنِي پَهَارِ وِي

A hungry man always hears the sound of chupatties cooking.

412. وِزِي دَ زَوِي سَرِي خَوْرِي

A hungry man will eat his son's lungs.

Also :— دَ وِزِي دَه عَنَدِرْ هُم كَارَرَه دَه

To a hungry man a ...is a carrot.
(cf :—Appetite is the best sauce.)

413. مور د وزی لہ حال خہ خبر دمی

What does the satiated man know of the hungry man's state.

414. وزخ چہ ذره شی کوتک (نیز) پہ اوره شی

i.e. When a man is out of luck every thing goes wrong.

415. وسله کہ بار ده خو پکار ده

Though arms are a burden, sometimes they are useful.

416. د یو وطن خاوره د بل وطن دارو وی

The dust of one country is gunpowder (or medicine) for another.

(cf: What is one man's meat is another man's poison.)

417. د طن سویه د وطن سپی نیسی

The dog of the country catches the hare thereof.

(cf: Set a thief to catch a thief.)

418. - وطن و خورده چچنڀرو بدنهای شوی به بلبللی

The sparrows ate up everything, and the bulbuls were blamed for it.

cf :—Cat's paw.

419. په ولاړی شوی بی چه نه کښنې

Were you born standing that you won't sit down ?

(Note :—Said to one who won't take a seat when paying a visit.)

420. داسی وده نشده چه دار وهلی نه ده

There is no tree which has not felt the force of the wind.

421. هره وده مه حوره نوه نه د رهر گندل سې

Dont eat of every tree, or one will turn out to be as oleander (poisonous.)

i.e. Take care what company you keep, or society you move in, so as not to come to grief.

422. ونی وچه که د ندر لسی خما له خپلی تې نه ومی

نوره نه جا وهام

The tree said, "If only the handle of the axe were not made of my wood, no one would be able to fell me."

423. که چه وینه زاریِ هسی مینه نه زاری
Love never weeps as blood weeps.
(cf :—Blood is thicker than water.)

424. ن هندوستان لپاری په سبر لنډېږي
Patience shortens the road to India.

425. هغه چه هندوستان نه دولت او د افغانستان نه سر اوړي هغه هونډبار دي
He is a clever man who brings back wealth from India or his head safe from Afghanistan.

426. چه هوره نه خوري د خولي نه د بوي نه څي
If you dont eat garlic your breath won't smell. (cf :—There is no smoke without fire.)

427. نوبنپار له کم عقل پند اخلي
A wise man takes warning from a fool.

428. د هیلو بچو ته غويي مه ښه
Don't teach ducklings how to dive.

(cf :—Don't teach your grandmother to suck eggs. It is also used in the sense of, Don't be such an obvious fraud.)

429. زور بار دن کھیتی اس سہی

An old friend is saddled horse.

i. e. Is always at your service.

430. لا دار شہ لا بدرار شہ

Be either friendly or downright displeased.

i. e. No half measures.

431. دا سہی ورخہ بہ وی اوداران بہ نہ وی

These nights and days will go on (or remain) but friends will not.

i. e. Life is short.

432. د داعوان داری د داغ بہر وی

A gardener's flirtations take place outside the garden.

433. دہم بہ ژ را شوخ دی

An orphan is an expert in crying.

i. e. One accustomed to misfortune can endure it better than those who are not accustomed to it.

434. يَتِيمٌ رُوْثَةٌ وَنَيْوَلَةٌ وَرِشٌّ وَرِبَانٌ كَالشَّوْءِ

The orphan began to fast, and the days lengthened out into years.

(Note :—The Muslim fasts by day only, and so suffers most in summer when the days are long and hot.

The saying means that everything combines to distress the poor.

(cf :—Misfortunes never come singly.)

435. يَخْذِي خُدَايَ رَسُوْلَ نَبِيِّ يَوْمَئِذٍ مَّا لَوْجٌ مِّنِّي

Cold acknowledges neither God nor His Prophet, but a handful of cotton wool.

i. e. One should not invoke God's aid in every trivial matter, but use the means He has provided.

(cf :—Heaven helps those who help themselves.)

ERRATA

(c) ketabton.com: The Digital Library

Page.	No. of the proverb.	For.	Read.
2	(line 7)	Heroditus	Herodotus.
17	11	from fire	fire from.
20	13	obatinable	obtainable.
21	8	troop	troops.
34	23		بداء برومي بدل برومي
35	28	Kabul.	the Kabul.
37	37		اوشن اوشن
43	60		دنکار دنکار
43	61	man	men.
44	64		ندره ندره
44	64		پلار پلار
44	65		پلار پلار
44	66		پلار بولاد
46	71	Because	because
48	76		درانت درانت
51	86	philanthropic.	a philanthropic
54	97	very.	Very.
57	103		صداشي صداشي
57	103	contra distinc- tion.	contradistinc- tion.
62	119	donkey.	a donkey.
67	141	will.	will.
72	160	undignified.	vulgar.

73	164	. l. e.	i. c.
74	166	shere.	sheer.
79	189	کبله جا کند	چا کبله کند
85	218	شوني	شدني
86	221	appeard.	appeared.
87	222	پوکل	پوکول
90	233	mauntains.	mountains.
103	279	278.	279.
103	279	hy.	by.
105	282	(i.e a village whose lands are dependant on rainfall.)	Delete.
110	300	andn auseat- ing	and nauseating.
112	303	really.	actually.
114	311	همزوي	زموي
115	313	His.	his.
116	319	Rupees.	rupees.
116	320	گه
123	344	salt.	salt ?
123	344	(cf: Pearls before swine).	Delete.
131	371	practice.	Practice.
133	379	describe.	describe a.
134	384	sheep.	sheep's.
135	388	Better.	It is better.
142	414	every thing.	every-thing.
143	421	as.	an.

(c) ketabton.com: The Digital Library

Get more e-books from www.ketabton.com Ketabton.com: The Digital Library